Tell All Rules For Used Cars

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

If that little old lady who last drove the vehicle was a racing driver, that fact has to be disclosed by the used car salesman under provincial legislation that took effect Jan. 1.

Under the new regulations, salesman must post the asking price, state the correct mileage, admit any previous damage and quote the full purchase price, including interest.

"These regulations will give greater protection to the buyer," Consumer and Corporate Affairs information officer Rick Stevens said today.

"We will have three full-time inspectors in the field to see the new regulations are being followed. In addition, there are six other inspectors in the ministry who can help to supervise these regulations."

Used car dealers will face higher provincial licences to help pay the costs of supervising the new rules. Annual fee in 1978 was $24. This rises to $81 this year and to $168 in 1980.

Sticker prices are required for every vehicle on the lot where any written representation is made.

If there is a sign indicating anything about the car, its make or year, the wording must include the asking price.

But if there is no poster or sign, a company does not have to display the asking price.

An important new regulation involves full disclosure of previous uses.

"The salesman must tell the prospective buyer if the vehicle has been used as a racing car, police car, emergency vehicle, taxi or as a rental car."

And if a car has been driven outside B.C., this too must be disclosed. This is to advise the customer the car may have been subjected to salt spray as a result of being driven in areas of heavy snowfall where salt is deposited on the roads.

Any car judged unfit for transportation must be labelled "unsafe" and can be sold for parts only.

There is also a provision for indicating all costs, including licence and interest to be paid by the consumer. These costs must be indicated in the sales agreement.

Stevens said few inspectors are required to police the regulations because customers and rival firms will provide leads.

"With legislation of this type we always get tips from a company that a competitor down the street is not complying with the regulations.

Skate Warning Not Heeded

A slight warming trend in the weather has prompted Greater Victoria police to step up warnings about skating on area lakes.

Police in Saanich and Colwood are going to schools and increasing patrols of the numerous lakes in their areas to spread the message that ice is melting so quickly skating is becoming unsafe.

But not everyone listens.

Said a Saanich police spokesman: "Some are listening to us; some are ignoring us. It's frustrating because there is nothing much we can do if a person refuses to heed our advice."

Colwood is experiencing the same reaction.

"We're getting some resistance. There are lots of people who don't agree," a spokesman said.

The danger is that in large lakes underwater currents and springs make ice formations uneven.

Last Friday a 15-year-old girl drowned when she fell through the ice while skating on Quamichan Lake near Duncan and four other persons were rescued in three separate incidents over the holiday weekend.

Meanwhile the Victoria weather office is forecasting a continuation of temperatures around the freezing mark, with highs of two degrees and lows of between minus two and minus four.

A spokesman said a large system of high pressure is moving down from the Arctic and has covered most of the interior B.C.

The system is causing winds to blow from the east, thus preventing the normal flow of warm moist air off the Pacific hitting the province.

The cold snap has sent the thermometer plunging in interior cities. Prince George went to minus 42 on Dec. 31, breaking the previous record low for that day set in 1968 with minus 40.

The thermometer dropped in Victoria to a record low of -10 and in Vancouver on the same day, it went to -11 degrees.

SURPRISE MOVE BY PROVINCE

Municipal Mill Rate Frozen by Wolfe

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The provincial government in a surprise move today froze all municipal government mill rates.

The object of the move by the senior government is to hold 1979 property taxes to the same level as 1978, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said at a press conference.

Wolfe admitted the move was prompted largely because the government feels a number of municipalities have not been doing a good enough job in practising restraint.

Municipal Leaders React Coolly See Page 10

And it limits municipal and regional government budget increases to a maximum of five per cent over last year.

"Any exception must be of an extraordinry nature and must be approved by the inspector of municipalities," Wolfe said.

And any municipalities carrying a surplus from the past two years must use it up in calculating their 1979 budget.

School districts are involved in the government decree to a lesser extent.

The province will be requesting municipal councils meet with local school boards to work out a program to minimize school district taxes.

And the ministry of education will accelerate its program of evaluating budget performances, including incentive provisions for school districts showing good fiscal management.

Other measures include using the current pupil-teacher ratio as a floor, an indication that the government feels the present ratio is as low as it will ever get.

Wolfe also said the government will be looking at school district administrative salaries and those that are too high by provincial standards will be identified and brought into line.

The minister reaffirmed an earlier announcement from the health ministry that hospital district budget increases will be held to the five per cent maximum.

Wolfe said school districts are not included in the specific freeze because the bulk of their budgets go to teachers' salaries which are decided by arbitration.

In the past, the government has appealed to municipalities to keep property taxes to a minimum, he said, but in many cases the appeals haven't worked so the government decided to impose the freeze itself.

AT THE MERCY OF THE COURT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Phylis Gilmour, struggling with cancer and no money, has thrown herself on the court's mercy over a lawsuit brought against her by the Eaton's department store chain.

"Do as you will, I can't fight any more," Gilmour said in a hand-written statement, consisting mainly of receipts, filed with the B.C. Supreme Court.

Gilmour was sued in December by Eaton's, which claims she has not paid about $1,700 owing on her charge account.

"If you feel I'm not trying to pay this account, do as you see fit. Placing me in prison, at least my money worries would be over," said the Sardis woman.

Gilmour's statement listed why she does not have the money to pay the bill.

It said that between December, 1977, and March, 1978, four broken bones in her foot kept her from working and she had no medical coverage.

She paid $200 of the Eaton's bill in October and December before her troubles really began.

Gilmour's statement says her home was destroyed by fire in December. She now is suing her insurance company because it won't cover the loss.

Her doctor then told her she has cancer. Finally, a tree fell on the trailer she is living in and the insurance company won't pay, claiming it was an act of God.

Canadian Airlift From Iran Begins

Times News Services

About 90 evacuees, some carrying babies, struggled off a Hercules plane at Ankara today, the first of a group of 550 Canadians and other nationals to be airlifted from the violence of Iran by Canadian aircraft.

Some were haggard, recalling gunshots and rioting, while others were more cheerful, glad to be plucked from the Iranian crisis where the shah likely will leave on a vacation soon as another attempt is made to restore a stabilized civilian government.

Prime Minister-designate Shahpour Bakhtiar promised today in Tehran to gradually dismantle martial law throughout this strife-torn country and hinted that Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi will leave Iran for "rest and a vacation."

In a news conference shortly after both houses of the Iranian parliament formally nominated him as Iran's new civilian prime minister, Bakhtiar said the shah's planned trip is "the desire he has expressed himself."

There is speculation Washington urged him to do it.

Bakhtiar, whose proposed government now must be approved by the shah, outlined his plans for restoring the country to civilian rule after two months of a martial-law regime installed to quell anti-shah riots.

Among other things, he said Iran will continue to sell oil to countries that need it, but he left open the possibility that continued exports to Israel could be jeopardized because of its dispute with other Moslem states.

The vote in the Senate was unanimous, but a spokesman said several members of the Majlis, the lower house, spoke and voted against Bakhtiar. Informed sources said the dissident deputies were offended by his statement in a TV speech Monday that Iran had been suffering from corrupt government for 25 years.

Striking oil workers have agreed to produce enough oil for domestic consumption in Iran on orders from exiled Iranian religious leader Ayatollah Rumollah Khomeini, his spokesman said today in Paris.

The 90 Canadians, Britons and Americans who came off the first plane at Ankara had been employed by Canadian forestry companies in Iran.

Evacuees spoke of growing food and fuel shortages, rioting and increasing anti-American feeling that had spread to the point where in some cases resentment also was expressed against Canadians.

School Closures Get Second Look

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

The unopposed election Tuesday night of Carol Pickup as chairman of the Greater Victoria school board strengthens a shift away from a board dominated by budget balancers.

In her inaugural address, Pickup reaffirmed she intends to keep schools open and to improve relationships with staff and parent groups.

She said after the meeting it's likely a moratorium will be placed on closing district schools.

Pickup, who opposed the decision by last year's board to close Bank Street and Tolmie schools because of declining enrolment trends, said Tuesday night the board hasn't accumulated enough information to make closure decisions.

A space utilization study suggested by Pickup and trustee John Young but defeated by last year's board could be approved this year, she said.

The board experienced a change in the balance of power when voters defeated the re-election bids of trustees Peter Dorazio and Bud Smith, both committed to holding costs down.

They were replaced by Dr. Martin Levin and Winfield Mott, who ran on similar platforms citing the need for an increase in educational quality in the district.

Levin, a University of Victoria political science professor, was elected vice-chairman of the board, replacing Dorazio.

During her address, Pickup said 1979 is the International Year of the Child and called for "rational humanistic planning".

She said the board should have a complete understanding of educational needs of the district before contemplating school closures.

Establishing goals and objectives for, meeting those needs should come first, she said.

Pickup called district employees "our most valuable resource" and said she wants to improve relationships with staff.

She also said the board must open lines of communication with the newly-formed Confederation of Victoria Parents Associations and other parent groups.

Pickup, who voted against a board decision last year to withdraw from the B.C. School Trustees Association because membership was too costly, said last night she wants to see the board back in the organization.

Another N.Z. UFO Filmed

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — Yet another unidentified flying object was filmed over New Zealand today by a television crew.

The object—described by the cameraman as like an illuminated ping pong ball with a tinge of red in the centre—was filmed where a rash of UFO sightings have been made recently off the northeast coast of the South Island.

The object, said by the television crew to have appeared about 3,300 metres in the sky over the sea, was not seen by an air force plane which conducted a midnight-to-dawn patrol over the area to investigate the sightings.

The defence ministry said its aircraft had concluded that a combination of bright lights from a Japanese fishing fleet and the rising of the planet Venus was a possible explanation for the recent UFO reports.

Television officials said they were handing over the film to the department of scientific and industrial research for computer analysis.

Reporter Terry Olsen said the crew had seen two objects but had film of only one. He described it as being three times as bright as an average star.

Sound recorder Lloyd McFadden said it was rotating on its axis and pulsating, while cameraman Cas Kasukaitis said: "It was definitely moving, because we fixed the camera on it and the object moved out of frame."

Olsen said the second object appeared to flare up suddenly by the side of the first. "It then scudded across the sky."

Fishing Pair Overdue

Jim Steer, 30, and Janet Cooke, 29, left Tahsis Friday in a 26-foot Reinell power boat.

They were expected to return to Tahsis on Saturday.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt said the couple may have travelled as far as Ucluelet or Tofino.

30 Seamen Lost As Tanker Sinks

Times News Services

MIAMI, Fla. — An international rescue squad resumed searching today for 30 seamen who abandoned an oil tanker that caught fire in the stormy Caribbean and later sank. Four crew members survived and at least one other drowned.

The five crew members who have been accounted for stayed aboard the burning, 350-foot Master Michael for 24 hours after the fire broke out before plunging into the sea Tuesday morning to swim for a passing ship.

U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Ray Baker said the ship sank later Tuesday about 288 kilometres south of Haiti.

U.S., Dutch and Jamaican aircraft and a Cuban navy patrol searched for the missing men in heavy seas until dark Tuesday.

The four survivors, who are aboard the ship Ilici headed for Venezuela, told rescuers their shipmates were forced into the rough seas Monday morning as the fire raged out of control.

The Coast Guard said no oil spill had been sighted.

Meanwhile, salvage crews held the crippled Greek supertanker Andros Patria on a steady course off the northwest coast of Spain today as local fishermen pressed demands for a ban on oil tankers within the country's 200-mile limit.

Fishermen from La Coruna and nearby ports met Tuesday night and agreed to ask Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez to force tankers to respect Spain's territorial limits.

The Andros Patria, carrying crude oil from the Persian Gulf to Rotterdam, cracked open and caught fire on New Year's Eve, spilling thousands of tons of oil off the coast of northwestern Galicia.

Thirty of the 33 people on board were feared drowned after taking to lifeboats which capsized in mountainous seas.

Three crew members were rescued from the ship by helicopter and salvage workers later boarded the abandoned vessel and brought it under tow.

Galician fishermen, who only recently recovered from the pollution caused by the wreck of a tanker in 1976, said supertankers pose a grave threat to their livelihood.

The salvage workers who boarded the Andros Patria from a Dutch tug Wednesday said they were holding the tanker steady about 30 nautical miles off the coast.

Buckling Roof Propped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Work resumed today on the second phase of the provincial government's courthouse development as the possibility of a roof collapse eased.

The several hundred workers at the project were evacuated Tuesday morning when cracks were noticed in several of the six-inch steel tubes which support the development's $1 million glass roof.

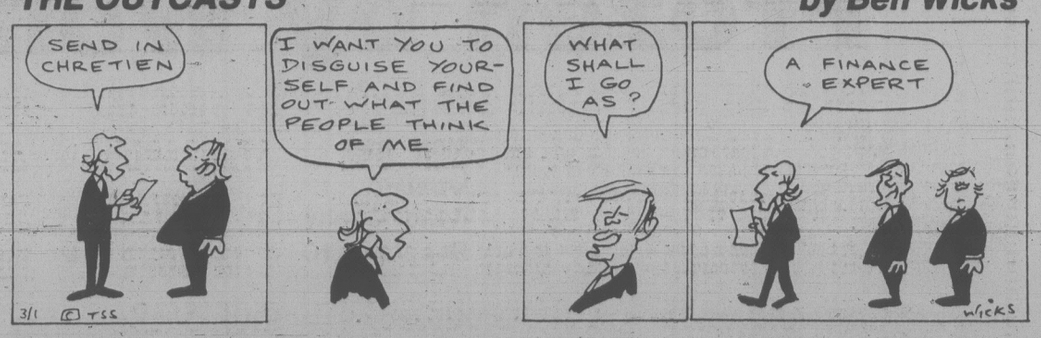

Construction officials said that water which had accumulated in some of the pipes had frozen, cracking the pipes when it expanded.

Scaffolding was erected to support the weakened areas.

When the cracks were discovered, police cordoned off the area, but traffic was flowing normally today.

Project chairman Gordon Shrum said Tuesday the situation is not a catastrophe, and the "only concern is that opening of the building may be delayed while the problem is rectified."

47 Die in Europe Storms

Times News Services

More snow is on the way to Europe, British forecasters predicted today as parts of the continent were still digging out from their worst weather of the century. Forty-seven deaths have been reported so far.

The forecast also included more of the strong northeasterly winds which helped produce the freeze-up from Britain all the way across Europe, now in its fifth day.

The sub-zero temperatures and snow were blamed for 19 deaths in Britain, 12 in West Germany, 10 in France, five in Hungary, and one in Sweden. They died shovelling snow, in road skids, falls, drownings, exhaustion in snow drifts or simply because they couldn't withstand the cold.

Meanwhile, a cold front that brought sub-zero temperatures, snow and death to the United States' mid-west moved east today, ending a rainy January thaw in the northeast and sending temperatures plummeting far below freezing all the way south to Alabama and Florida.

It was a widespread—and severe—cold snap. Citrus growers in Florida and Texas feared crop damage. Thousands of homeowners near Detroit shivered through up to three hours of chill when furnaces went out during power outages.

Snow was reported from Michigan through the Ohio Valley, in eastern Tennessee and the northern Rockies. In Wisconsin, at least three storm-related deaths were reported—a man and a woman dead of exposure and a man who apparently collapsed at the door of his home.

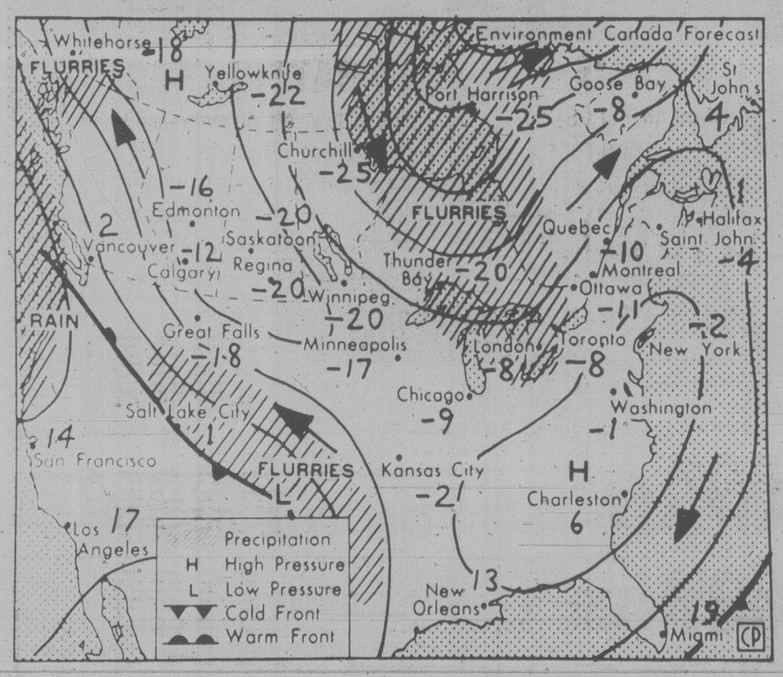

A heavy snow warning was issued for northwestern Pennsylvania, and winter storm warnings were posted in New York state and Vermont.

Hospital emergency rooms in Dallas were crowded with victims of cold weather and icy conditions Tuesday, with one hospital reporting 22 persons brought in with broken bones after slipping on ice.

In central Florida, angry spokesmen for Florida Citrus Mutual said there may have been tree damage because growers were caught with heaters off when the temperature dipped 10 degrees lower than forecast.

Aftershocks of an earthquake that rattled five California counties continued Tuesday as winds of 150 kilometres an hour and flooding closed an interstate highway and several bridges, stranding hundreds of motorists.

Tell All Rules For Used Cars

These leads help us to control the situation with a relatively small staff."

He said the inspectors will also crack down on illegal car salesmen masquerading as private sellers.

Some of the people offering cars for sale in the classified ads are really freelance used car salesmen, he said.

"This practice is illegal and we will be trying to stamp it out. The only people in the business should be those who are controlled by regulations."

Disclosing correct mileage is one of the more difficult problems faced by used car operators, he said.

For example, someone selling a vehicle to a used car lot may have tampered with the odometer and the salesman may have no way of knowing the correct mileage. However, the legislation requires him or her to state that the mileage on the meter may not be correct, if it appears to have been tampered with.

The salesman must also disclose previous damage that has been subsequently repaired. This applies to damage of more than $1,000 to a used vehicle and to damage amounting to more than 20 per cent of the asking price on a new vehicle.

The latter requirement applies to cases where a new car may have fallen off a delivery vehicle and had to be repaired before its first sale.

In cases where the operator advertises the car for sale, the price must immediately be posted on the car because a representation has been made about the vehicle.

However, the ad itself does not have to contain the asking price.

The posting regulations apply to both new and used cars. In the case of new cars, the manufacturer's suggested retail price must be posted if there is any sign associated with the vehicle.

SEAT BELT SAVES LIFE

KELOWNA (CP) — Police say a seat belt may have saved the life of a 70-year-old man when his car was in collision with a train in this Okanagan city.

Ludwig Ritter was only slightly injured Tuesday night after his car collided with the train at a Canadian National Railway crossing. The car was dragged a short distance by the train before it rolled off the track.

Police said the vehicle was destroyed and the retired man's life possibly was saved by the fact he was wearing a seat belt and not tossed from his car.

New Mideast Talks By Mid-Month

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Middle East peace negotiations between Egypt and Israel will resume in Washington in mid-January, an Israeli diplomat disclosed today.

The senior diplomat, who spoke to reporters with the understanding that he would not be further identified, said details and the exact date are still being worked out, but Israel has agreed to send its negotiating team back to Washington at a time proposed by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

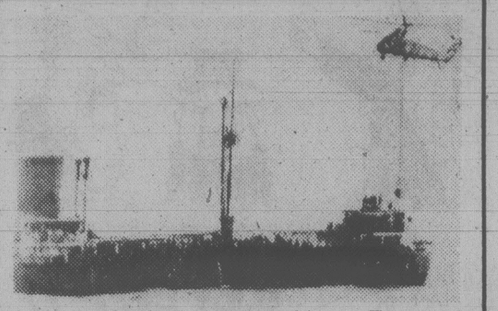

Vance, according to the official, has cleared his calendar in mid-January to resume his role as mediator in the talks, which broke off in November.

The Egyptians are expected to agree to the resumption of the talks, which will probably take place at the ministerial level agreed to during a December meeting in Brussels with Vance. A spokesman for Vance said he could not confirm the report.

The Israeli team would be headed once more by Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and the Egyptians are expected to be headed by Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil, who has assumed the role as the leading spokesman for President Anwar Sadat in the Egyptian cabinet.

The senior Israeli diplomat said the only issue to be resolved involves a letter of clarification to be attached to the basic treaty text. The letter would contain clarifications of the basic treaty. The Egyptians insist that it contain the controversial concept of a target date linking the peace treaty with establishment of Palestinian self-governing councils in the occupied West Bank and Gaza.

The Israeli official said Israel cannot accept a firm target date, such as the one proposed by the United States. The official said the Israelis could accept, however, general language committing both sides to move toward a comprehensive settlement as rapidly as possible.

Boat People Win Reprieve

United Press International

The plight of stranded Vietnamese refugees eased today in Hong Kong where the government granted a reprieve to 2,700 "boat people" and in the Philippines where a UN envoy interceded on behalf of 2,100 others.

Official sources, reversing an earlier hard-line stand, said the refugees aboard a freighter in international waters outside Hong Kong would be given food, water, medical treatment and blankets until some country admits them.

However, the British colony maintained its insistence that the Huey Fong, which left Vietnam bound for Taiwan, will not be allowed to berth in Hong Kong.

A special UN envoy met today with Filipino officials who have ordered another freighter, the Tung An, loaded with 2,400 Vietnamese refugees towed out to sea.

One man has died and at least 15 people have been hospitalized since the Panamanian-registered Huey Fong arrived off Hong Kong's shores 10 days ago.

"We will not let them starve or drown," one Hong Kong official said Tuesday.

Hong Kong has supplied the ship with 13 tons of food and 74 tons of fresh water — "enough for three days" — government sources said.

Doctors who visited the Huey Fong said its passengers were in generally good health, although many have swollen limbs from lack of exercise aboard the packed vessel.

Administrators are working behind the scenes to get commitments from the United States, France, Canada, Australia and other countries before Hong Kong permits the Vietnamese to land.

There are already some 4,000 refugees from Vietnam at a former army barracks and in hotels and throughout the colony.

Informed sources said at least three more ships the size of the Huey Fong and Tung An were expected to bring more refugees this month.

Filipino officials had given the 1,600-ton Tung An at least a week or 10 days to anchor in Manila Bay a mile offshore while arrangements were being made for their possible resettlement elsewhere.

Day Churchill Urged N-Attack On Russia

LONDON (UPI) — Sir Winston Churchill urged the United States to launch a nuclear attack on the Soviet Union in 1948, when only the U.S. had the atomic bomb, once-secret British Cabinet documents disclosed Tuesday.

President Harry S Truman and Prime Minister Clement Attlee both rejected Churchill's nuclear-war proposal, which had been intended as a tactic to break the Soviet blockade of Berlin.

The papers said Churchill, who was leading Britain's Conservative opposition at the time, made his pitch for a first strike by the West privately, in a conversation with Attlee, and "it was rejected immediately."

The Cabinet documents were made public for the first time under British government rules which keep all such records secret for 30 years.

U.S. Ambassador Lewis Douglas was quoted as saying Churchill's plan was "full of practical infirmities."

Ernest Bevin, foreign secretary in Attlee's Labor Party government, also was quoted as saying he "had no use for it."

Churchill made his proposal at a time when the United States alone had nuclear capability. The Soviet union did not yet have an atom bomb.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, U.S. military governor of occupied Germany, had proposed sending an armored column through the Soviet zone to relieve beleaguered Berlin.

But both U.S. and British air force generals favored the airlift, which continued until May 1949 and ultimately forced the Soviets to end the Berlin blockade.

The ultimate decision to combat the Berlin blockade with an airlift was taken on the recommendation of Gen. Albert C. Wedemayer, U.S. Army chief of operations, who was quoted in one document as saying, "a conventional land attack on the Soviet forces in Eastern Europe would result in annihilation of the Western allies' armies."

British governmen alarm over the risk of a third world war in 1948 was shown in a memorandum from Bevin to the cabinet headed "the threat to Western civilization."

It asserted that the Soviet politburo was planning "physical control of the Eurasian land mass and eventual control over the world — no less a thing than that."

HE DRANK BLOOD OF YOUNG GIRLS

FRANKFURT (UPI) — Police have arrested a modern-day vampire and said the 22-year-old suspect has admitted he sometimes drank the blood of teen-age girls whom he lured to his apartment.

Police said Tuesday they searched the man's apartment and arrested him after a 15-year-old girl charged he enticed young girls to his apartment, drugged them, abused them sexually and drank their blood.

Police, who withheld the man's name pending his formal arraignment, said a search of his apartment revealed marijuana and other drugs and large hypodermic needles bearing smears of dried blood.

Calif. Aftershocks

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — More than 100 aftershocks have hit Southern California since the New Year's Day jolt that rumbled through an area from San Diego to Santa Barbara.

The Monday quake shook windows and nerves but caused no injuries and only slight damage.

Three light aftershocks were recorded Tuesday by seismologists at the California Institute of Technology. A spokesman said the first shock of the day was recorded at 10:16 a.m. and reached an intensity of 3.3 on the Richter scale.

Monday's temblor, timed at 3:11 p.m., measured 1.6 on the scale. It was centered on the floor of the Pacifc about four miles south of Malibu.

The spokesman said two aftershocks also hit the Los Angeles area Tuesday around 2:30 p.m., measuring 2.9 and 3.0 on the open-ended scale.

Why Keep It a Secret?

The federal political parties are reported to be extremely wary of releasing the names and addresses of the people each has nominated for the coming federal election. They don't want them pestered by special interest groups, it seems, and regard such information as confidential until the writs are actually issued for the poll.

Why are the party brass so tenderly solicitous of their standard bearers? According to recent interviews with some of the party apparatchiks, they don't want the candidates' views and opinions misinterpreted or distorted by various "one issue" organizations. The anti-abortionists and save the seals people and bring back the noose types will have to wait until the campaigning starts officially, or laboriously search newspapers and telephone directories for the information they need to get at the men and women who will soon have a crack at making and changing the country's laws. Because the political parties, ostensibly defenders of democracy, don't want to help them one bit.

For example, Robin Sears, the national secretary of the New Democratic Party, recently advised all NDP candidates to have nothing to do with a questionnaire circulated by the National Citizens' Coalition, an organization given to badgering the government and political parties through big newspaper advertisements about "waste in government" and profligate spending on unnecessary programs.

Its belief that the federal Liberals have given away the farm to grasping civil service unions, and thus raised the cost of government to unbearable levels, that the post office is a dismal mess created by an intransigent union, and so on in a similar vein, hardly makes it a friend of the Grits, or of labor's ally, the NDP.

But does that justify such a close-mouthed policy as all the parties appear to have adopted in the run-up to the 1979 general election? What are they afraid of?

Are their candidates such weak and spineless individuals that they have to be cosseted and kept under wraps? Are they so delicate that they might wilt under the cruel glare of publicity? Are the one-issue lobbyists so formidable, the candidates so puny and defenceless that they need the strong arms of party headquarters to fend off importunate buttonholers? Do they need their names and whereabouts kept under wraps until the official eight week election campaign starts?

The party operators who are planning the campaign already, who have probably mapped out their leader's entire schedule for an election, say that when the election is officially called then one and all can have at their candidates in the usual free-for-all.

That seems to be an entirely arbitrary date. Are they suggesting their candidates will do no campaigning until that time? That is nonsense, of course. Candidates of all parties were out there knocking on doors and mainstreeting weeks and months ago, meeting as many voters as they could.

Undoubtedly, the singleminded pressure groups like the Animal Welfare Fund or Greenpeace or Pro-Life have become powerful, pesky gadflies. Frequently, their method of operation is the threat: if MP John Doe does not vote for or against a certain piece of legislation, then it will campaign against him at election time. The member's progressive stance on arms control or prairie grain shipments or gun control count for nothing in the pressure group's calculations. Either he's for us or he's against us.

Edmund Burke's remarks on the role of Parliament, "where, not local purposes, not local prejudices ought to guide, but the general good . . ." and that an MP owes it to his electors to work hard, and to use his good judgement, but "he betrays instead of serving you if he sacrifices it to your opinion," are subversive to these people. To them, an MP should be no more than a conduit, a voting machine who reflects exactly the sentiments of a majority of the voters in his riding.

This would destroy Parliament, but are the political parties helping to preserve it by hiding their candidates? Even his staunchest opponents would respect a candidate who stood up and stated his opinions on the issues. Parliamentary democracy may not be helped by the ferocious single-minded lobby groups, but neither is the cause aided by this retreat of the federal parties.

Some Predictions for '79

OTTAWA — This day a year ago, I predicted there would be an election in June, 1978. As you may have noticed, there wasn't.

I'm not always wrong. Back in March, 1977, I predicted that the question Premier Rene Levesque would ask Quebecers in the referendum would be: "A mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association, oui ou non". As well, I never predicted that Prime Minister Trudeau would "renew his vows" with Margaret.

The election date. Trudeau's preferred joice is June. He may, in mid-February, call a quickie for mid-April, depending upon whether the Feb. 5-6 constitutional conference leaves him an opening to run against the gang of 10 provinces, or with the nine against the one (Levesque) or, the least likely prospect of all, to run with all of them if enough progress is made toward a new constitution.

NDP with Balance?

The election result. The Conservatives will win, either with a bare majority or with a large minority. Something like 130-150 of the 282 seats.

In Quebec, the Conservatives will limp home with five or 10 seats. They'll be off to the races everywhere else, though the going will be slower in the Atlantic provinces. As for the Liberals, they will not, even in their soft underbelly of Toronto, do as badly as they did in the byelections.

The New Democrats could decide the majority-minority issue. If the unions march to the beat of Canadian Labor Congress president Dennis McDermott's drum, the NDP could win the 30-40 seats necessary to deny any winner a majority.

After the election. Clark, as prime minister, will prove to be a great deal tougher, more resilient and much cannier than most people expect him to be. But as dull as anyone expects him to be. Remember Mackenzie King, or ask your dad to remember him for you, and you've got a good preview of Clark as prime minister.

The star of Clark's cabinet, I predict, will be ex-Toronto mayor David Crombie. He's a bouncy, engaging, "touchy-feely" politician of the type that Ottawa desperately needs. He'll emerge as Canada's equivalent of the late U.S. vice-president Hubert Humphrey, an apostle of the politics of hope.

Trudeau will accept defeat with a shrug and come right back, at least until the referendum, to be the finest opposition leader we've ever had. As he showed at the start of this Parliament when he went after Clark head-to-head, when on the attack and not on the defence, Trudeau can be quite terrifying.

Pity Joe Clark. Pity also Levesque, since Trudeau after the election will be able to go after him in the role of Quebec's wounded champion, wounded that is by Levesque having provoked English-Canadians until they could no longer endure a francophone prime minister.

National unity. Levesque will win his soft referendum, but not so much because Quebecers agree with him but because they would not want, by defeating the referendum, to undercut their government on the eve of negotiations which might give them what they really want — some form of renewed federalism that encompasses special status or two nations or whatever facesaving phraseology is applied to the final formula.

The referendum thus might be a catharsis rather than an apocalypse. Quecers might get their grievances out of their system, and thereafter voluntarily enter Confederation for the first time.

The economy. It'll be, to leave the worst to the last, a downer. There's a 50-50 chance the U.S. will slip into a recession before the year is out. If so, we will follow some time in 1980.

Back to Controls

Although we've been dragging along since 1974, we've done nothing of consequence to pick up our economy. A depressed dollar has given us a temporary, artificial advantage, but at the cost of later hyperinflation.

Two specific guesses. Around the end of the year, we'll be back into wage and price controls. The U.S., now going through the usual, temporary and quite futile, experiment of voluntary controls, will get there first. We'll follow soon afterwards.

Next year's budget deficit, of about $15 billion, will become the new government's first, and make-or-break, order of real business. Either spending will have to be cut, or taxes will have to be raised, or both. Otherwise, we'll soon be borrowing money to pay the interest on past borrowings. Either the Conservatives will act during their six months "honeymoon", or they will not act at all. If they do act, it'll be painful. If they don't act, it'll be more painful still.

To have a Happy New Year, think about national unity.

A Good Investment

Last month we printed an editorial (Short-term Gain vs. . . ., Dec. 21) urging Oak Bay municipality to ensure that the profits it makes from the sale of its riding academy land be used in some way to benefit future generations of Oak Bay residents, not just those who live there now.

It has been made clear to us by Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith that this is exactly council's intention.

Smith explains that the $1.25 million the municipality receives for the sale of the 9.4 acres of land will be kept in a trust fund to earn interest for the repayment of existing municipal debenture debts. At prevailing interest rates, the interest accumulated each year will be about $125,000 per year, an amount which, applied to the principal and interest on the existing debts, will lead to a tax reduction of about two mills a year. Although the precise mill rate may vary depending on interest rates throughout the years, the income from the investments should always be available to ease the tax burden on Oak Bay ratepayers.

Smith notes that this policy might change only if interest rates were to drop so low that it would be to council's financial advantage to pay off some of the debenture debt rather than carry it through the years. However, there are no economic trends that would suggest such low interest rates becoming a reality.

This use of the money council receives from the sale of the academy lands may not be very imaginative, but it will serve to benefit all Oak Bay residents for years to come.

For that, council is to be congratulated.

Good Old Helmut

The sad little performance of Defence Minister Barney Danson on CBC's Question Period (Dec. 17) has dealt another blow to my morale. Most government pap seems to affect me thusly nowadays.

To hear yet another "honorable gentleman" parrot the standard Grit apologia of "vicious press," "irrational ill-feelings" and "inescapable world-economics" is profoundly depressing. To listen to the fatuous claim that he basks in the full support of the prime minister, is downright nauseating. Faugh! If it weren't for Herr Helmut Schmidt putting the screws on, he wouldn't get as much as a rowboat. Come to think of it: best damn minister of defence this country ever had, is old Helmut!

No, no, Mr. Danson. There's more to the drop in Liberal fortunes than the economy, or bilingualism or Western perversion. The rot set in ten years ago when your party politically prostituted itself. Need one spell it out? However, it takes a long time before a decaying tree comes crashing down.

Over the years many true and honest Liberals have melted away. All that seems left now, is a chorus line of Punchinellos who roll over and play dead at the bidding of the Great Helmsman.

Stop the ship, please. I want to get off. — F. Kerfoot, 6211 Rodolph Road.

Privilege to Serve

I would like to thank the residents of the municipality of Saanich in re-electing me to the position of alderman, thereby giving me the opportunity to serve for another two years.

In today's society when we are all so busy I would like to express my appreciation for the letters written by Mary Beaumont and ex-alderman Robert Cameron in the letters-to-the-editor column in their support for me.

It is a privilege to serve. — Mary Casilio, 1150 Union Road.

Proposed "thermoregulatory" study of polar bears cruel, reader says.

Cruel to Bears

The more one finds out about various conservation and wildlife services in Canada the more one has to wonder just what they are conserving.

The horrible experiments they carry out on living animals, such as some time ago the slow drowning of muskrats allegedly to "test" some kind of trap. Mr. Bawlf had a lot to do with that one as well as the proposed poisoning of wolves.

The latest horror story concerns the capturing of polar bears, coating them with fuel oil and if this does not kill them, force feeding oil to them.

Of course one would wonder just how they were going to get large polar bears to stand still for this. But wait, they were going to take little polar bear cubs for this quote "toxicological and thermoregulatory research" and who was this cruelty going to benefit? An oil company, a Norwegian gentleman and why were we in Canada and particularly in Manitoba going to do this?

That's a very good question. And when I heard that the premier of Manitoba thought this was just a great idea I wrote him a letter giving him my opinion. Recently I received a letter from his secretary with an interesting enclosure.

The man in charge of this "experiment" is Mines, Natural Resources and Environment Minister Brian Ransom. It has been suspended, not cancelled, pending the "re-evaluation of the necessity of the research and the methodology used." Indeed, I understand there was a general outcry against this research and methodology when the public finally heard about it.

According to the enclosure the project involved Imperial Oil, the good old Canadian Wildlife Service, the government of the Northwest Territories, the University of Guelph, the Eastern Arctic Marine Ecological Survey and was directed by Dr. Nils A. Oritsand of Norway.

It is still possible that this incredibly cruel "experiment" on polar bear cubs will be carried out. — E. Wakefield, 308-576 Simcoe Street.

Wrong on Debt

You recently published a letter from Ann Moffat regarding Saanich municipal debt and financial policy. The letter is so completely erroneous on matters of fact and so incapable in its conclusions, it is difficult to know where to start in making a response.

First, recent councils have not "borrowed heavily" to achieve a controlled tax rate — in fact Saanich has not incurred any significant increase in debenture debt since the major capital works referendum of 1975.

Secondly, the current municipal debt is $18 million, which is exactly what it was in 1975. So there has been no "dipping into the pockets of money lenders" which is a great bit of political oratory but completely false. The debt rate, which is the relationship between debt and total assessment, has in fact decreased from nine per cent to seven per cent during that period due to added assessment.

The statement that Saanich has the highest debt rate in the province is just plain nonsense. There are higher debt rates all over B.C. including three in Greater Vancouver. In any event, with a rate of seven per cent Saanich has utilized only one-third of its permitted borrowing power.

Thirdly, the accusation that finance committee chairmen of 1977 and 1978 have held the tax rate by increasing debt is utterly ludicrous and shows an abysmal ignorance of municipal finance and of the authority to borrow given under the Municipal Act. During 1977-78, there was very little borrowing and then only for clearly defined and approved capital projects.

Finally, I would suggest that the best way to avoid irresponsible and misleading statements is not to submit them in letters to the editor! — Ian Cass, 3844 Merriman Drive.

(P.S. If residents really want to watch for danger signals, they should keep a careful eye on the $2.5 million which is held in the general revenue surplus fund. It is very tempting for council to appropriate these funds to avoid or reduce tax increases. The purpose of this fund is no different from personal savings. It is a buffer against unforeseen demands. It should not be reduced below $2 million and the aim should be an increase to $3 million. Watch out for that one. I already hear rumblings!)

Wrong Track

I believe charity begins at home. I give to the 500 Fund, the Salvation Army, the children in our district that swim or run for charity, the Women's March, the United Way. I work with my lodge for the Cancer Society, etc. Some others I can't remember.

I see these Unitarian ads in the paper from time to time and feel that you would do a great deal more for these countries if you spent more money teaching them birth control methods. Religion or no religion, there is no religion that feels these babies should be born and have to suffer these terrible things. I have thought of this situation very often and feel that you are on the wrong track altogether. I have discussed this with many others and they feel as I do. — May Ethel Birch, Victoria.

General Strike

I am doing research on the 1919 Winnipeg general strike for a labor history paper and perhaps another work. I would appreciate any material or information I am not likely to find in libraries and archives.

I am particularly interested in contrasting the positions of the Social Democratic Party and the old Socialist Party of Canada of today. — Larry Tickner, 589 Nora Place.

Not So Bleak

The more I read your paper the bleaker Canada's future appears to me. Please let an uneducated person have his say too.

Endangering freedom of the press: I am referring to an article by W.A. Wilson entitled: "A profound contempt by PM for the Democratic Process (Times, Dec. 13) — a conclusion put as the heading of an article which does not, by any means, follow from its contents.

Mr. Wilson's concern for the "democratic process as a whole", is clearly something of which he misses every understanding. Or, maybe, he should take some "French lessons" in order to regain the art of expressing himself in English. I am sure that if he starts reasoning objectively about his concern, his next article will start uniting the country and its heading will give our youth a vision of the future.

Don't Look Now, But There's a Leak in Family Boat

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Too much of the world, and of Canada, insists on being surprised by what is happening to the price of oil. It is an unhealthy attitude because it enables people to avoid preparing for the inevitable.

The new pricing schedule set up by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will introduce increases totalling 14.5 per cent by next October. The countries of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, including Western Europe, the United States, Japan and Canada, had not planned for this in their deficit projections for next year, which was foolish of them. OPEC signals — and OPEC losses to North American inflation — had made it a very likely proposition that the new price increase would be big.

Canada has its share in this international ostriching, and its own domestic variation. No sooner were the OPEC price increases announced than various Canadian soothsayers were declaring that the increases would have no immediate impact on Canada. That is so much nonsense.

Canada imports more oil than it exports — about 30 per cent of its needs. This imported oil is subsidized by Ottawa (that is, by the Canadian taxpayers) to bring it level with the fixed Canadian price. The costs of this subsidization are not equalled by the tax imposed on Canadian oil going to the United States. Starting with the first of the OPEC price increases, on January 1, the bill for subsidization will start to grow, for a total estimated increase in 1979 of $50 million.

It has also apparently been forgotten by many that Ottawa and Alberta had already traded in one $1-a-barrel increase on January 1 for two, one on July 1, 1979, and one on January 1, 1980. These increases were hitched to the world and U.S. prices and might not have occurred without the OPEC increases; and Canada is still committed to move to the world price. One of the few unsurprised Canadians, Alberta Energy Minister Don Getty, says the Ottawa-Alberta deal anticipated the OPEC price increases.

Informetrica Ltd. an Ottawa-based private economic forecasting group, estimates that a $1-a-barrel increase means an increase of 0.7 per cent in the consumer price index (the less objective Ontario government figures the increase at a full 1 per cent lower growth in the real gross national product.

Anybody who says the OPEC prices will not affect Canada is not facing the facts. The facts, however, did not escape all members of the community.

As soon as the OPEC increases were announced the Canadian dollar fell again. The reasoning behind its fall was that the big oil price increase would fuel inflation in the United States and weaken the U.S. dollar and therefore the Canadian dollar or, as The Globe and mail's Hugh Anderson put it, "Sellers of Canadian dollars were acting in the belief that what is bad for the United States is worse for Canada." Canadian and U.S. bond prices were hit by the oil price increase.

Some analysts are also getting anxious about the rate of increase in the Canadian monetary base and in the Bank of Canada's holdings of federal government securities. Year-over-year growth in the monetary base was around 9.5 per cent in the first quarter of 1977, but this has risen to about 13 per cent in the most recent three months. Bank of Canada holdings of federal government securities have been registering year-over-year gains in the 18 to 28 per cent range throughout 1978. This is what is referred to in circles frowned upon by the government as printing money. Another harbinger of more inflation.

The country's growth rate is lower than expected, the price of energy is higher, the value of the dollar is down, the government is again speeding up the rate at which it is living beyond its (and our) means. If there is not an inflation bubble in 1979 it will be a miracle.

But the most frightening part of the situation is that we are not facing things. We have not accepted that energy is going to take a larger part of personal and national income for the foreseeable future. Our government is behaving as though inflation were no threat.

It is like firmly refusing to notice the leak in the bottom of the family boat.

By SETH S. KING

Warnings that vast sections of agricultural land in Africa and Asia are disappearing into the deserts, while the fertility of a fifth of the earth's cropland declines, are by now so familiar they no longer startle. But it was something else again to hear Bob Bergland, the Secretary of Agriculture, proclaim recently that soil erosion in the United States was at a record high, and that water supplies were being reduced at a reckless pace.

"We are on a collision course with disaster," he said.

It was also surprising to hear Lester R. Brown, director of the independent research organization, Worldwatch Institute, say that American farmers were not caring for their vulnerable soils as well today as they did a generation ago.

There may have been a trace of hyperbole in Bergland's alarm. But soil conservation experts would dispute him only on the degree of his concern, and none of them would quarrel with Brown's appraisal.

Many adults now in their 40's were brought up to believe that America's farmland had been made secure by the millions of dollars spent on New Deal soil conservation programs that introduced farmers to contour plowing and draped the cornbelt in soil-preserving terraces.

But the Agriculture Department's Soil Conservation Service, the federal agency that supervises protection of the land, has found that in 1977 more than 2 billion tons of topsoil was washed away from cropplands and an additional 3 billion tons from crop and range land was eroded away by the wind.

Chemical fertilizers, weed killers End old practice of crop rotation

This preliminary survey found that the hardest hit areas were not in the old Dust Bowl of the Southwest but in the rolling hills of Missouri, western Tennessee, and western Mississippi, which each lost more than 10 tons of topsoil per acre of cropland.

The survey also showed that such highly fertile areas as Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, and Nebraska were annually losing between 4 and 10 tons per acre and that the wind was blowing out more than 10 tons per acre every year from the cotton and wheat lands of northwest Texas and the feed grain lands of New Mexico and Arizona.

The reasons for an accelerated erosion of topsoil reflect both the changes in farming patterns that began in the mid-1960's and the economic roller coaster American farmers have been riding since the early 1970's.

When grain prices soared in 1973, all planting restrictions were removed and most American farmers plowed up every acre they owned or could rent. Much of this planting was on marginal land that erodes easily.

New chemical fertilizers and weed killers developed in the past 15 years have lured farmers away from the old systems of crop rotation that included resting a part of their cropland each year under a cover of grass or nitrogen-producing legumes that protected the soil tilled the year before.

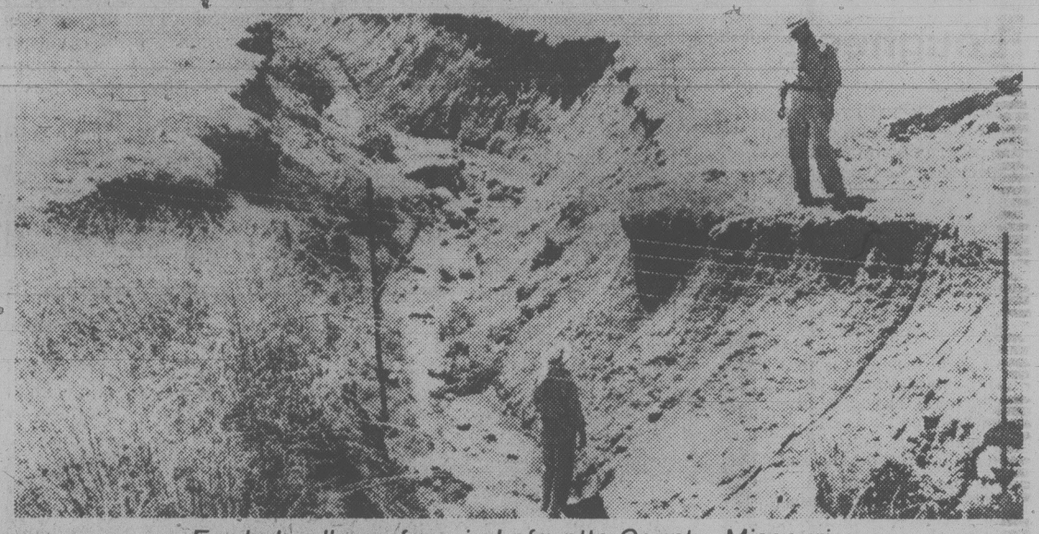

And the soil-preserving terraces were designed for farm machinery that tilled four rows at a time. The monstrous new machinery of today tills eight or more rows at a time and won't fit over the old terraces, many of which have been obliterated.

While overgrazing, overtilling, and, in some areas, excessive irrigation of lands in Africa and Asia are slashing grain and livestock production so sharply that many developing countries can no longer feed themselves, the effects of today's topsoil losses on food production in the United States are expected to be felt more slowly.

Soil scientists say that under normal weather and farming conditions, the organic matter and crop residues that good farmers leave after harvest will replace as much as five tons per acre of soil loss. Any amount above that, however, is gone forever.

On a single acre, five tons is the equivalent of about one-thirtieth of an inch of topsoil. It would take many years if rain and wind to erode away the 10 to 14 inches of fertile dirt that cover good land.

The more immediate concern of the soil conservationists is what the new erosion is doing to rural watersheds and to municipal water supplies. Many small streams in the Middle West and South are rapidly silting up, reducing the flow into the municipal storage reservoirs, which themselves are shrinking as silt fills them. Eroded soil is washing or blowing into fertile bottom lands, covering them with silt and increasing the threat of flooding.

Eroded gully on farm in Lafayette County, Missouri

In the western sections of the corn and wheat belts, and especially in the cotton and wheat lands of northwest Texas, the pumping of ground water is lowering the water tables faster than inflowing rain can recharge them.

The washing away of soil in the Mississippi basin is now at a rate, the Army Corps of Engineers says, that brings more than 400 tons of silt per minute to the river's mouth. And last month the United States Geological Survey reported that 120 square miles of Arizona's irrigated farm land is sinking as the ground water is pulled out. In some places, the surface has subsided by a much as seven feet.

In the past decade there has been a small but steady loss in natural fertility from erosion, even in some of the best lands of the Middle West, R. M. Davis, director of the Soil Conservation Service, said recently. This is happening at a time when the country's per-acre yield rate is no longer increasing but its population is. In addition, more than 2 million acres of agricultural land is being lost each year to urban development, he said.

"The technology is there to stop these soil losses, but we haven't kept pace in conservation with the new farming methods," Davis said.

Rites of Passage

katharine whitehorn

LONDON—When a bishop suggests the young should do a form of national service, one usually thinks of some bellicose prelate hankering for the good old days of church parades. Last month, however, it was the Bishop of Southwark, and his plan was simply that the young and unemployed should do a couple of years' community service; it would be a chance to prove their worth by doing something other than carve up old ladies and throw bottles at policemen.

Not that there aren't plenty of people who'd like to see a straight return to conscription. Plenty of other European countries have it; the bleakness of the barrack ensures that no man ever takes home comforts for granted again; it keeps up the grand old oral traditions of The Ball at Killiemuir and The Harlot of Jerusalem.

Alas, in order to get its raw recruits into anything like manageable shape the Army has to begin by stamping out any pansy hankerings for personal opinions or privacy or individuality — just the things we've been trying so hard to instil into our young. And the military themselves don't like it: they'd far rather have soldiers who are keen to be there and can be chucked out at will, than be stuck with a bunch of rough-necks who will only do anything because they'll be put on a charge if they don't.

One's always told, of course, that the service gave the chaps a respect for authority. Actually it didn't do anything of the sort. What it gave people was a conviction that you couldn't change authority; so all their energies went into outwitting it instead. Ex-service people at college thought university rules were ludicrous, but they never tried to alter them, they simply broke them; it was the ones who hadn't learned the futility of protest who did something to get things changed.

My husband, one mild afternoon at RAF Padgate, tired of emptying heavy dustbins; so, noticing that the bins and the lids had numbers and that they didn't always match, he spent a more happy afternoon trotting around doing no more than write down the numbers of the dustbins and their lids. "What are you doing, airman?" asked a passing sergeant. My husband explained. "Who told you to do that?" "The corporal, sergeant." "Corporal who?"

"The corporal who told me to do it, sergeant." "Oh. Ah. Very well."

Such antics may have fitted him for life as an industrial spy, able to get into any factory anywhere simply by carrying a plank and looking plausible. But it's hard to see what the attitude did for the questing, cooperative Britain we were supposed to be building. It certainly didn't teach people to think; it may have taught them to skive.

But would it not be possible to devise a sensible and humane scheme that would avoid such military pitfalls? Couldn't the young be dragooned into doing what outfits like the conservation Corps and Task Force do voluntarily now — visiting old ladies, beautifying slag-heaps, chatting to the handicapped? Might it not, even, be a chance to repair washing machines and the chaps to learn something in the communal kitchens more skilled than the spud-bashing of yore? Of course, the unions would be dead against the first and the grannies of Cornwall, who couldn't stand the thought of little boys learning sewing in primary school, would doubtless swallow their false teeth at the mere suggestion of the second. But about grannies and unions I feel the same: if you confine yourself to trying things that won't put their backs up, you might just as well not try at all.

One attraction the idea does have, to my mind, is that it would provide a definite barrier between one's life as an adolescent and one's life as a real grown-up — a rite de passage in the anthropological sense. In our society, unfortunately, only a few apprentices, a few nurses and those who think that college exams will sort the men from the boys (and then have to worry how you sort the men from the academics) have any sort of landmarks to pass — except sexual ones. And, since they are kept at school long past puberty, the only rite that seems to prove them adult is all too apt to be marriage.

I'll get married, that'll prove I'm old enough to get away from Mum, she says. We'll get married, then we'll get a coucil flat, says he — possibly to a girl he's never been away from long enough to know if she's really his first choice at all. No wonder they don't live happily ever after. National service may have taken the fresh sensitive young lovers away and welded them into a barrack-room gang, but it did at least help them to grow up first and then get married, instead of the other way round. And anything else that took the young firmly away from home might do the same.

Only — I just don't see in practice how it could be done. "Community service" sounds so beautiful; but it would have to be compulsory, or it would leave out the very ones we're worried about: the drifters, the disillusioned, the ones who played truant at school. And how do you make anyone do community service, without getting back to the old Army way of doing things? Solve that one, and I'll get interested. But otherwise. . . .

"What are you doing with that paint-bucket?"

"Taking it to the old folks' home, sir."

"Who told you to do that?"

"The social worker, sir."

"Which social worker?"

4% Growth Forecast for B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Employers' Council of British Columbia said today economic growth in B.C. during 1979 will be about four per cent, compared with a national forecast growth of 3.5 per cent.

Council president Bill Hamilton said unemployment will continue at unacceptably high levels and while the inflation rate is expected to decrease, it will remain disturbingly high.

The mining industry may be at the beginning of a new cycle, Hamilton said, because exploration has been increasing and prices for major metals improving.

He said in a news release that 1979 should be another good year for the forest products industry, although stabilizing product prices, an expected modest appreciation in the value of the Canadian dollar and the impact of higher stumpage charges will cause earnings to show little or no growth.

However, Hamilton said the anticipated decline in U.S. demand for lumber will be partially offset by increased sales to Europe and Japan.

The council forecasts at least 1.7 million housing starts in the U.S., down from two million in 1978.

"Of particular interest to B.C. companies," Hamilton said, "is that the size of houses is increasing, despite the steady decline in the size of households."

The council said tourism should continue strong, fueled in part by an improved, but still devalued Canadian dollar.

Retail sales are expected to show an increase of four per cent, it said.

The council said the fishing industry is expected to have a good year following a strong perfomance in 1978, when prices increased dramatically.

While the construction industry will suffer from sluggish demand and unemployment, Hamilton said, it is expected to pick up in mid-year.

The Last Hurrah For Alberta's Lougheed

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Peter Lougheed says the next Alberta election, expected within the next six months, likely will be his last.

"I recognized two or three years after I got elected (in 1971) that I probably had to look at a three-term situation to get things done," he said in a year-end interview.

"I spent most of the first term (until March, 1975) trying to get the energy situation resolved" in a series of national discussions over oil and natural gas pricing and taxation.

Lougheed, a former corporate executive who is 50, said he plans to step aside late in his next term "unless there's some unusual crisis in either confederation or in the province which I can't anticipate."

"If we're re-elected (in 1979) I think people have given me the responsibility to conduct the affairs of the province through most of the following term."

First elected in 1967 to the legislature, he served as Opposition Leader against the previous Social Credit administration.

He said his Progressive Conservative party, which holds 69 of the 75 seats in the legislature, faces a tough election because a government cannot help but accomulate opponents during eight years in office.

CHAMBER BONDS PLEDGED

City hall and the Victoria Chamber of Commerce will work on a closer relationship in 1979, Mayor Mike Young said Tuesday.

Young said the city planned to respond to the chamber's call for better liaison between the two bodies by having aldermen attend monthly meetings held by chamber directors.

Young said aldermen will take turns attending the meetings.

The chamber directors meet twice each month, but only one of the meetings is open to the press, the other is in camera. Aldermen will attend the private meetings.

The mayor said he didn't think any rift existed between city hall and the business community.

Homes Grants Limit Lifted

The provincial government has raised the ceiling on the price of houses for which it provides grants and mortgages, Housing Minister Jim Chabot said Tuesday.

Chabot said the limit was raised an average of $4,000 on houses in the interior of the province and $2,000 in the metropolitain areas.

In Vancouver and Victoria, the new price ceiling for mortgages is $65,000, and for grants, $64,000.

He said this was prompted by the need to provide support to the purchaser of standard modest homes now available on the market and by rising land and construction costs, particularly in areas outside metropolitain Victoria and Vancouver.

The minister said the price limits are adjusted every six months and are set at a level which assures coverage of a supply of modest homes in each community.

"I want the ministry grant programd to be an effective way of helping new home and first home purchasers," said Chabot, "these new price limits will ensure that more families are helped to buy homes."

Trident 176 Found Guilty

Times News Services

SEATTLE (AP) — The trial of anti-Trident protesters in Seattle is over, but a spokesman for Live Without Trident says demonstrations against the weapons system will continue.

Mary van Bronkhorst said Tuesday night that the protesters got the forum they were looking for in the trial before U.S. District Judge Donald Voorhees, which ended in guilty verdicts for all 176.

She said the group will meet in the next couple of weeks to discuss future plans.

The protesters were charged with re-entering the Trident nuclear submarine base under construction at Bangor on Hood Canal in a May 23 demonstration. The defendants had been warned in letters from the Navy not to trespass again after they had already clambered over base fences on May 22.

Voorhees, who heard the case last week, said he would not accept the protesters' defence that their actions were justifiable because they were trying to prevent the greater evil of nuclear war.

Sentencing was set for Jan. 26. The protesters face up to six months in jail and $500 fines.

Ms. van Bronkhorst said she did not feel the trial was fair because Voorhees did not accept the defendants' contention that the Trident missile system is in violation of international law. Defendants argued before the court that Trident has first-strike capabilities, thus violating international accords.

Defence lawyer Irwin Schwartz said he is not suprised by the verdict. He said the trial, which was held in an auditorium because of the number of defendants, was fair.

'. . . NOTHING BUT PRAISE'

TORONTO (CP) — An Air Canada official had nothing but praise for 250 Edmonton-bound passengers stranded at Toronto International Airport for two to three days after their flight was cancelled Sunday because of heavy fog and rain.

"Considering the circumstances, the people were excellent," said Edward Barclay, passenger service supervisor. "They were very reasonable."

Although 23 passengers managed to get other flights, 227 had to wait until a special flight was arranged for them Tuesday night.

"It was beyond my belief that they were so reasonable," said Andrew Harvey, an Edmonton carpenter. "Everybody fell into line. Nobody complained. They were so Canadian. I guess Canadians are reasonable people."

Donald Ross, Air Canada's passenger service duty manager, said it took so long for the special flight to be arranged because Sunday's shutdown played havoc with schedules.

Planes which should have been in Toronto "were all over the world and Canada," he said.

Woman Reported Fair After Balcony Leap

A middle-aged woman is in fairly good condition with back injuries at Royal Jubilee Hospital after jumping from the second floor balcony of the Oak Bay Manor on Saturday.

The woman, a multiple sclerosis victim confined to a wheelchair, left the personal care ward where she has been a patient for several years, dragged a small table to the balcony, climbed up and jumped off, falling about 20 feet.

She suffered ankle and back injuries.

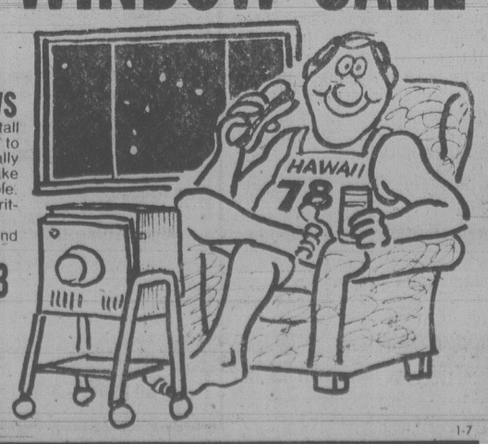

A spokesman for Oak Bay Manor said today the patient will be admitted to the Glengarry Hospital on Fairfield when the hospital's new extension is opened this month. She could give no details on Saturday's incident.

$1 Billion Highway?

The new 142.6-kilometre Coquihalla Pass highway linking Hope with the Okanagan Valley will cost B.C. taxpayers more than $1 billion, a spokesman for an environmental protest group claimed Tuesday.

Derrick Mallard, president of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment, said in a news release that by projecting the first contract — $8.3 million for 4.5 kilometres of the highway — the new route will cost $1.07 billion.

But R. G. Harvey, deputy highways minister, said Tuesday said it is impossible to project figures when building highways.

He said the first contract is for the toughest part of the route and the ministry expects the total cost will be $250 million as predicted.

Mallard said the new highway may well be the largest and most ludicrous financial expenditure of its kind ever perpetrated on the complacent public of B.C.

He renewed his association's appeal for moratorium on the project.

Off-Road Licence Push

The provincial government's environment and land use committee wants all off-road motorized recreation vehicles licensed, a spokesman for the lands, parks and housing ministry said Tuesday.

The spokesman said this means all off-highway vehicles, including motorcycles, snowmobiles and four-wheel drive units, would be covered by regulations similar to those in the Motor Vehicles Act rather than the Summary Convictions Act as is now the case.

It would include a ticketing system identical with that now used by the RCMP for normal traffic violations.

The spokesman said legislation implementing the proposal is expected to be presented to the legislature at its spring session.

Designated enforcement officers will include conservation officers, park officers, forest rangers and peace officers, the spokesman said.

The committee also has recommended changes to the All-Terrain Vehicles Act to include motorcycles and four-wheel drive units. At present the act only applies to snowmobiles.

Coal Chief Named

A former president of Neptune Bulk Terminals Ltd. has been appointed B.C. coal co-ordinator effective Jan. 15.

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Graham Kedgley will promote the development of B.C.'s coal reserves through co-ordination with the coal industry.

Phillips said Kedgley will also act as liaison between the provincial government and the transportation industry and commercial and industrial users of coal.

Port Cost Fear

VANCOUVER (UPC) — B.C.'s 1,000 longshoremen vote this week on whether to accept a new two-year contract that some shipping officials fear could hike port costs far above those in competitive United States ports.

Marine industry officials said the contract submitted for ratification by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, Local 502, was too generous and could put Vancouver out of the competition with American ports. The proposed contract would raise the base rate of $9.10 an hour to $11 an hour over two years. The base rate is paid only on an eight-hour day-shift, however, union spokesmen explained.

Gays Demonstrate

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 15 men and women demonstrated peacefully outside the downtown court house Tuesday in defence of gay rights and freedom of the press. Members of the Gay Alliance Towards Equality want charges of possession of obscene material against a Toronto-based gay rights organization dropped. The trial of the homosexual group Body Politic was scheduled to begin today.

Welfare Rip-Off

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who decided it was so easy to collect welfare that he applied under three different names, was sentenced Tuesday to three months in jail. Thomas William Cochrane, 21, got more than $5,200 in welfare before being charged with fraud.

Cable TV Service Ordered

L. and C. Cablevision Ltd. of Ladysmith has been ordered by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission to commence local community channel service in the Ladysmith-Cowichan area.

The order is part of a five-year renewal of the company's cable licence and permission to extend its sphere of operation north to Cassidy, effective April 1.

The commission noted access to the company's community channel is limited to School District 65 and pointed out that this channel must be available to all individuals and groups within the service area which includes Duncan, North Cowichan, Saltair, Quamichan and Cowichan District.

Immediate steps must be taken "to ensure that use of the community channel does not remain the exclusive privilege of any particular group," the CRTC said, expecting development of specific plans for that channel.

The cable distributes CHEK-TV, CBUT and CHAN-TV and is being considered for distribution of CFRO-FM, Vancouver.

In other decisions, the CRTC has renewed TV cable licences for five years for Lake Video Service Ltd., Lake Cowichan; Alberni Cable Television Ltd., Port Alberni, and Kelsey Cable (1971) Ltd., Kelsey Bay and Sayward.

Pedersen Piped In

BURNABY (CP) — George Pedersen was piped into office Tuesday as president of Simon Fraser University while several pickets watched from outside the administration building.

Pedersen, 17, is the fourth president of the university. He took over from Pauline Jewett, who resigned to pursue a political career.

The new president paused outside the building to shake hands with the pickets, members of the Association of University and College Employees, on strike since Dec. 5.

Pedersen, former vice-president of the University of Victoria, was chosen in August by the Simon Fraser board of governors.

Ms. Jewett won the federal New Democratic Department nomination for the riding of New Westminster-Coquitlam in the fall.

Chrysler Subsidiaries Go Peugeot

PARIS (AP) — The French auto group Peugeot-Citroen will acquire control of the European subsidiaries of Chrysler Financial Corp., the wholly-owned finance company of Chrysler Corp of the U.S., under the terms of an agreement announced by Chrysler-France.

The operation follows the purchase last month by Peugeot-Citroen of Chrysler Wholesale Ltd. of Britain, the company said.

The subsidiaries involved handle financing of dealers' stocks, instalment buying and leasing of Chrysler vehicles in Britain, Ireland, West Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium, France, Spain and Italy. Chrysler-France said revenue of the subsidiaries totals about $1 billion.

CYPRUS ANVIL MINE EXPANDS RESERVES

EDMONTON (CP) — Cyprus Anvil Mining Corporation is spending $22 million to buy properties near its lead-zinc mine in the Yukon.

Selwyn Jones, vice-president of administration, said in a telephone interview from Vancouver that if the purchases are approved by boards of directors and shareholders of the companies selling the properties, the deal could be formally completed by mid-February.

Jones said the purchase would double the company's proven lead-zinc reserves to 80 million tons in the Faro region and extend the life of the town beyond the year 2000.

Current reserves would have lasted until 1987.

"This will give our workers in Faro security of employment and ultimately give us a more stable, permanent work force."

Cyprus Anvil is buying the properties from a group of companies including Kerr Addison Mines Ltd., Canadian Natural Resources Ltd. and Bangorda Mines Ltd.

Most of the new properties—the Grum, Vangorda, Swim Lake, Champ and Firth deposits—could be open-pit mined to start but would require underground mining after about 10 years.

Jones said the Grum deposit is the largest of the group with 27.8 million tons in proven and indicated reserves and would be the first to be developed, most likely by 1984.

Petroleum Tab $10 Billion

EDMONTON (CP) — The petroleum industry spent more than $10 billion in Canada during 1978, says the chairman of the Canadian Petroleum Association.

Ted Baugh said in a year-end statement that the expenditure was up from $8.8 billion in 1977.

"More than 6,900 exploration and development wells were drilled in 1978, compared with 6,200 in 1977," Baugh said.

A major share of industry expenditures flowed back into the Canadian economy in the form of wages, payments for supplies, taxes and royalties, he said.

Record levels of exploration and the start of large energy projects such as the Syncrude Canada Ltd. oil sands extraction plant were all part of unpreecedented activity for the oil industry during the year.

"If stability returns to oil and gas pricing and if new markets can be found to alleviate the pressures being caused by a growing surplus of natural gas in Alberta, this high level of industry activity should continue throughout 1979."

Natural gas discoveries continued throughout the year and the potential of the deep basin area was disclosed, serving as a basis for industry activity in 1979.

"The Alaska Highway gas pipeline, the proposed oil sands and heavy oil projects, renewed offshore exploration activity and further delination of promising new fields such as West Pembina and the deep basin will continue through 1979 and beyond."

Rate Freeze Reaction Cool

Wolfe Freezes

He said that the Municipal Act may have to be amended to implement the order.

Asked if the government was interfering with the responsibilities of duly elected municipal level governments, Wolfe replied only that as a senior level of government "we are expected to take action which will exercise restraints."

He said the public has been calling for restraint in government at all levels.

"The provincial government has responded to this message. Local governments must also take heed."

The minister said the province has already acted on reducing local taxes. For example, school districts have received increased grants for operating and capital costs.

Municipalities and regional districts have received increased assistance through the new revenue-sharing formula.

And local taxpayers have received some assistance through the homeowner grant.

"The provincial government, however, cannot continue to underwrite excessive growth in local government expenditures," Wolfe said.

Municipal and school board spokesman reacted coolly today to Wolfe's announcement.

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said Wolfe is being misleading in implying the freeze will ensure against property tax increases.

"It doesn't mean there'll be no increase in dollars, it means there'll be no increase in mill rates," he said.

Couvelier said the announcement has no effect at all on Saanich and he doubts it will have any on other Greater Victoria municipalities.

"It's already clear that our mill rate in Saanich is unlikely to increase because we are in the second year of a three-year phase-in program on market assessments, and our assessment is up roughly 10 per cent," he said.

"Because of that fact the mill rate will not have to increase."

However, many individual home owners will still face higher tax bills because their individual assessments have gone up, he said.

Couvelier described as "a cheap shot" Wolfe's explanation that the government was forced to step in because municipalities had not responded to calls for restraint.

"I consider it a cheap shot as it applies to Greater Victoria."

The vice-president of the B.C. School Trustees Association, Rubymay Parrott, said the freeze announced by Wolfe will do nothing to help local schoolboards.

"The provincial government should give us the tools to work with instead of putting us in a straight jacket," she said.

"If the provincial government is serious about helping taxpayers they should reduce the basic mill rate set by the provincial government, which they have increased dramatically over the last three years."

She said Wolfe's announcement displays a lack of confidence in local government and in school boards and will do nothing to protect local taxpayers.

Ald. Murrary Glazier, chairman of Victoria's finance committee and head of the Capital Regional Board, said from the city's point of view the freeze on the municipal mill rate presents no problem.

"I don't react adversely to these comments (by Wolfe) because it fits in with our current practice and our declared intentions for 1979," he said.

"I'm not opposed to it because we're doing it."

Glazier said the city's provisional budget, which was brought down in December, held the mill rate at the 1978 level.

Glazier was somewhat critical, however, of the government's restriction on municipal, regional and hospital budgets, which are to be held at increases of no more than five per cent in 1979.

"I think a limit like this . . . is approaching the problem from the wrong direction," he said.

"The important thing is the cost to individual taxpayers and I think that the minister will hear lots of adverse reaction from growing communities.

"I think it's a mistake for anyone to think that we can solve taxpayers' problems by putting an arbitrary limit on total budget amounts, because total budget amounts are not always meaningful, they're offset by taxpayer revenues and senior government revenue transfers."

Israeli Jets Buzz Arabs

BEIRUT (UPI) — Palestinian anti-aircraft gunners opened fire today on Israeli jets that flew over Palestinian camps near the southern port of Sidon, witnesses said.

None of the jets were hit, they said, but Palestinian guerrillas were on full alert.

The incident marked the third consecutive day that Israeli aircraft had penetrated Lebanese airspace and the fifth day of Israeli military activity in the tense southern border area.

Jogging Came Naturally In the Shiver and Quiver

max low

OKAY, so it was cold. But it didn't stop the hardy souls. About 120 of us ranging in age from two years to 86 braved the elements Monday for the now-traditional YM-YWCA New Year's Day walk, jog or what-have-you to Clover Point and back.

Because of the temperature, in fact, more jogged than walked this year to keep the blood flowing as the bracing wind whipped over the cliffs along Dallas Road.

Once down at Clover Point, those whose fingers weren't frozen joined in to help roll a huge Earth Ball back to the Y.

And once inside in the warmth again there was plenty to help restore the circulation: cups of hot apple cider, coffee and chocolate, doughnuts and muffins and, for those who felt up to it, a swim, sauna and a steam bath.

They had a hard job getting me out of the steam room, I can tell you, as I was delighted just to relax and be hot again after all the cold we've been getting.

But most of the walkers and joggers were happy to just sip cider and share the camaraderie in the auditorium; chatting with people like Archie McKinnon, the 82-year-old grandfather of the Y who was there to hand out door prizes that ranged from movie theatre tickets to stacks of Big Macs.

With people like Donald Elliott, who will be 86 in June and walked the whole way to Clover Point and back to the Y, almost four and-a-half miles.

Like 58-year-old Earl Hembroff, who is blind, and his seeing-eye dog Fleetable-Eatable (Fleet for short) who not only made it both ways but actually went further than most of us because once he got down on the Dallas Road cliffs "Fleet felt like more of a walk."

And with others like Winona Pugh, the Y's mobile fitness director, who organized the event; Tom Cardinal, associate adult program director; and Vic Lindal, former top volleyball coach in the province.

Billed as a New Year's Day Family Affair, it turned out to be just that for the Cardinals with six-year-old Jenny jogging along between Tom and wife Rosemary and two-year-old Sara alternating between a jog or two and a ride atop Dad's shoulders.

"It's just great this year," Tom told me. "It used to be predominantly Y people taking part but we've got a bigger turnout and a wider mixture of people this time. And it's good to see community involvement in the shape of donated door prizes."

Two of my children left after a tiring afternoon happily clutching their prizes — a meal for two at the Keg 'N Cleaver and a couple of passes to Sealand — but what they talked about most on the way home was their run in the cold.

That was a shared thing. Something they could feel and understand, that even when conditions and times are adverse it's easier and more exciting if they are shared with others. And I feel this is a thought we need to keep with us as we step into the rest of 1979.

It was a new thing, too, for many. A decision to try something different and to start the New Year on a healthful note. That's why many came, they said.

For Vic Lindal and his family the Y outing was their second run of the New Year.

"My three boys and I played bridge until midnight," Vic explained with a grin.

"As the clock struck, we had a toast. Then, because we had decided to start the New Year on a healthy foot, we donned track suits and went out for our first run of the year at 12:05."

Must admit I was well and truly (no, not sloshed) settled by a roaring fire with a glass of wine to raise at the magic hour.

But doesn't Vic's midnight madness make some of you feel just a little guilty at the condition you were in at 12:05 . . .

LAWYERS ASKED FOR RELEASE

Saanich, Legal Firm Part

Saanich has severed its $45,000-a-year contract with the Victoria law firm of Pearlman and Lindholm and will consider appointing its own permanent staff solicitor.

Council Tuesday night approved the firm's request to be released immediately from the contract, three months before it was due to expire March 31. The firm and its predecessors had acted as legal advisers to the municipality for more than 60 years.

The action follows the recent B.C. Supreme Court decision to quash the Minnie Mountain land-use contract bylaw because Ald. David Paterson is employed by Pearlman and Lindholm as office manager.

Paterson voted for the bylaw, on which Pearlman and Lindholm had advised the municipality.

In a lengthy letter to Saanich asking to be released from its contract, Pearlman and Lindholm noted that Mr. Justice Trainor had quashed the bylaw on grounds of Paterson's "purported indirect interest" in the land-use contract, "merely because the developer is a client of ours (although we did not act for him with respect to the particular matter in dispute). . ."

For that reason, the firm said, "we have decided that an earlier cessation of our association would be in the best interests of the municipality, our employee Ald. Paterson and the good people of the municipality."

In any case, the letter stated, the rapid growth of the municipality and the increasing complexity of its business appeared to indicate the need for the appointment of a permanent staff solicitor.

Pearlman and Lindholm also pointed out that it was becoming increasingly difficult for the firm to maintain a senior solicitor on solely municipal business three or four days a week, as well as a junior solicitor one or two days a week.

At an in-camera meeting following the open council meeting, council accepted the firm's offer to release lawyer Christopher Nation (who has been serving as associate municipal solicitor) to act as municipal solicitor until a permanent appointment is made.

Council endorsed a six-month contract with Nation for a fee of $14,250.

A staff recommendation will be prepared for the finance committee on whether Saanich should hire its own solicitor or invite other firms to bid for supplying legal services.

Only Aldermen Irene Block and John Mika opposed the motion to end Saanich's contract with the legal firm.

Block questioned the need for such "unseemly haste," and suggested the contract be allowed to run its proper course to expiry in March.

Mayor Mel Couvelier replied that Trainor's verbal judgment had raised a number of legal points "which on the face of it appear contradictory and which appear to put in question the possibility that Ald. Paterson should be sitting on council at all."

If the contract were to be ended in March anyway it might as well be terminated immediately, the mayor said, adding: "There's no sense in us buying potential litigation or headaches."

Parking Solution Expected

A traffic problem that frustrated a city business so much it threatened to move out of the city will probably be solved soon, Victoria Ald. Bill McElroy said today.

McElroy visited the Hafer Machine Co. Ltd., 1720 Store, last week after reading the company was thinking of leaving the area because of traffic problems.

Company general manager Barry Challenger said line-ups at the nearby city garbage wharf were blocking his trucks from entering the plant, and when company vehicles parked in the street they were ticketed.

Challenger said the machine shop, which employs 30, was sometimes blocked off for up to two hours.

But McElroy says after looking at the problem he's sure the traffic engineers can sort out the matter.

"It's not a big problem really and I'm sure we can work out some sort of compromise," said McElroy, chairman of council's traffic and transportation committee.

He said the traffic department will send someone down to meet Challenger next week and discuss solutions.

Asbestos Insulation Search Set At Schools

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

An investigation has been ordered to see if cancer-causing asbestos spray has been used as insulation in Greater Victoria schools.

The check is being carried out by school district and regional board officials.

Former board chairman Susan Brice said Tuesday the problem probably doesn't exist in this district, but administrators are looking into it.

Dr. Allen Arneil, regional health officer, said the regional district's school health officer will discuss the situation with school authorities before taking any action.

Dr. Arneil said while there is no evidence the problem exists here, medical health officials are alerted.

"We've got to watch we don't go overboard being concerned, but on the other hand, we've got to watch we don't go overboard being smug about it," Arneil said.

Concern has been expressed in B.C. after recent reports from the U.S. that millions of public school children may be exposed to harmful asbestos particles in the air of their classrooms.

A U.S. environmental group has charged one out of every six schools could have dangerous asbestos coatings and has filed a petition with the Environmental Protection Agency demanding it identify all public schools where asbestos is a hazard.

The Environmental Defence Fund is charging that school children across the U.S. are subjected to cancer risk of unknown magnitude.

William Hawker, B.C.'s acting superintendent of facilities development, said the ministry doesn't know if the problem is serious in B.C.

He said there are 1,600 schools in the province and it's possible some of the others might have similar problems.

He doesn't think there is much of a problem in B.C. and said the situation is only dangerous if asbestos fibre is openly packed around pipes or sprayed on walls.

"If it's hidden, it's safe."

POLICE BOARD CHOICE 'GRAVE DISCOURTESY'

Saanich council is upset with the provincial cabinet for appointing Victoria lawyer Bob Hutchison to fill one of three vacancies on the Saanich police board.

Hutchison's name was not included in a list of four possible appointees suggested by the municipality.

At Tuesday night's council meeting the cabinet choice was described variously as a slight, a grave discourtesy, an embarrassment and possibly illegal.

Aldermen agreed Saanich should make its displeasure known to Premier Bennett. They also asked the municipal solicitor to look into the legality of Hutchison's appointment.

The latter point was raised by Ald. John Mika, who said he understood Hutchison was the only police board member appointed in the province without the prior endorsement of the B.C. Police Commission.

Such approval is either implicitly or explicitly required by provincial legislation, Mika said.

He also termed the appointment unwise because Hutchison had represented the Saanich police board in the two most recent arbitration proceedings involving a contract dispute between the board and the police union.

"He is the very fellow who has fought them (the union) on behalf of the board," Mika said. "That does not augur well for the police force in the next three years."

Rents to Rise On Apartments

Apartment rents may rise about six per cent in Victoria this year because the vacancy rate has declined, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation district manager Chris Dowling said today.

He said a federal CMHC survey shows the October rate was down to 1.1 per cent from 4.4 per cent in April, 1978.

"This came as a bit of a surprise because there are still a large number of advertisements for apartments to rent," Dowling said.

"Still, they went out and counted about 20,000 apartment units so the figures must be accurate."

Dowling said the new situation will allow some landlords to raise their rents to recover increased costs this year, but only by small amounts.

"I would expect to see rent increases of about six per cent during 1979."

This would still leave rents lower than in Vancouver, Calgary or Edmonton, he said.

He said the ideal vacancy rate is from 1.0 to 1.5 per cent, which is the present situation in the Greater Victoria area.

The Victoria rate is below Vancouver's 1.3 per cent, and Calgary's 1.5 per cent but above Edmonton's 0.9 and Toronto's 0.7 per cent.

The vacancy rate in the Victoria area, by district, is Victoria City 1.2 per cent, Saanich 0.2, Oak Bay nil, Esquimalt 1.9 per cent.

In Victoria City, the rate was 0.1 per cent in the Cook Street area, 1.3 per cent along Fort St. and 0.6 per cent in the James Bay area. In the remainder of the city it was 2.4 per cent.

TOWN TALK

If you feel like whooping it up on New Year's Eve and travelling home by bus afterward the thing to remember is — Never on Sunday.

That was the cold, sobering truth which struck a number of Greater Victoria revellers who had been counting on using B.C. Hydro's traditional free bus service.

They found themselves facing a long walk or an expensive taxi ride because there were no buses running after about 11.30 p.m.

The official explanation from Hydro transit manager George Seright is that no special arrangements were made because New Year's Eve this year fell on a Sunday.

"Running the late service involves overtime and overtime is voluntary. We just ran the normal service," he said.

The Times newsroom could be in the movies.

Paramount is mulling the possibility of using the editorial rooms as a set for a movie called Letters From Frank and production manager Paul Tucker said today a decision will be made soon.

Shooting for the movie, starring Art Carney, Jean Stapleton and Lillian Gish, begins next Wednesday in the Lower Mainland area and will take about three weeks.

Tucker says the $1.3 production will become a CBS movie of the week.

The story centres around a newspaper paymaster whose job becomes redundant because of a switch to computers. He chooses early retirement rather than accept another job and the movie will focus on the problems he faces.

So you were a little out of it New Year's Day after all that jazz (rock, disco?) the night before and you didn't relish the thought of washing the family car.

Particularly having to get the head down low to scrub the whitewalls.

Gadzooks, what's this? Locked doors?

Right. The car wash emporiums — or most of them — were victim of the cold spell. Frozen tight, and losing revenue.

It's All in the Game

Anyone who wandered past Bay Street Armoury late Saturday morning couldn't help wonder if they had suddenly landed in the midst of a military take-over.

Rifle-toting soldiers were all over the place.

But we are assured it was all part of an internal security exercise by the Fifth Field Battery militia unit.

Don't look so front-line up tight next time, chaps. Scared the holiday spirit right out of some people.

Home Sweet Home!

Those days of lengthy confinement when mother and child "did well" for as long as a week in hospital before they were released like fragile eggshells, are long gone.

Sophomore Jinx No Bother: Bossy

Times News Services

Don't talk to Mike Bossy about a sophomore jinx. The second-year New York Islanders right winger already has scored more goals this season than some forwards have in the last two, and he shows no signs of letting up.

Bossy scored three more in Tuesday night's 9-0 National Hockey League rout of Vancouver Canucks, increasing his total to 33 in 36 games this season and swelling his lifetime mark to 86 in 109 regular-season games.

The Montreal native, New York's No. 1 pick in the 1977 amateur draft, admitted he thought about the jinx before the season began, "but it wasn't a dominant factor in my mind.

"Other people talked to me about it, and that's what planted the seed," said Bossy, who scored 53 goals last season and is still three weeks from his 22nd birthday. "They said, 'Wait until you face the sophomore jinx,' but I guess I've overcome it, wouldn't you say?"

The figures certainly say so, but those astronomical figures have characterized the Islanders' season. They have yet to lose at home in 19 games, are unbeaten in their last 10, have lost just one of their last 26 and their four losses in 36 games are the fewest in the National Hockey League.

The Canucks found out why Tuesday night, falling behind just 3:59 into the contest on the first of two power-play goals by Bossy. That opened the flood of offensive support that backed the first shutout of the year by netminder Glenn Resch.

For the Canucks it was a disaster, their second straight goalless game and their ninth loss in their last 11 games. They have won one in that time.

It was 6-0 Islanders after two periods, and Resch sympathized with his Vancouver counterpart, Glenn Hanlon.

"He's a rookie, he's a nice kid, and he's trying to establish himself," said Resch, who faced 23 shots. "I was hoping for a scoreless third period; hoping that we wouldn't score any more goals against him."

Bryan Trottier set up four goals—including Bossy's three—while Clark Gillies had two assists, giving the trio 168 points this season.

In the only other league game, Colorado Rockies defeated St. Louis Blues 4-2.

The triumph enabled the Rockies to climb out of the Smythe Division basement into third place.

Delorme scored twice in the early moments of the third period to send the Rockies ahead and both goals came on all-out efforts by the Comeau-Klassen-Delorme trio, which is normally a checking line.

St. Louis' rookie Wayne Babych scored twice, one in each of the first two periods. With 19 goals for the year, Babych is one of the leading first-year, goal-scorers in the NHL.

Philadelphia Flyers tied Wings of the Soviet 4-4 in an exhibition game.

Bobby Clarke scored twice in the third period—his second with just 16 seconds remaining in the game—to bring Philadelphia back from a two-goal deficit.

With Flyers goaltender Bernie Parent on the bench in favor of an extra skater, a shot from the Wings blueline caromed off the glass behind the Soviet goal and deflected to Clarke.

The Flyers' captain, standing alone at the edge of the crease, knocked the puck out of the air and past netminder Vladimir Myshkin, who argued unsuccessfully that Clarke's stick was above his shoulders.

Alexander Skvortsov scored twice for the Soviets

Gretzky and Howe

EDMONTON (CP) — Wayne Gretzky of Edmonton Oilers teamed up with New England Whalers' Mark and Gordie Howe for three goals Tuesday night to lead the World Hockey Association All Stars to a 4-2 win against the Soviet Union's Moscow Dynamo club.

The game, which drew a crowd of 8,038, was the first of three between the all-star squad and the Moscow club to be played in Edmonton this week. The next two are Thursday and Friday.

Gretzky, the Oilers' 17-year-old centre, scored two goals—one 35 seconds into the game. Mark Howe added another while his father, Gord, assisted on two of the line's three goals. Winnipeg Jets' Peter Sullivan added the third-period insurance marker.

Dynamo senior coach, Vladimir Kaseliov, said the game was the best his team played so far on its North American tour. He said the club was hesitant about facing a professional all-star team, but "our team will have a chance to get ready for the next game."

Dynamo led 2-1 after the first period, while the second period ended in a 2-2 tie. The WHA squad outshot the Moscow club in all three periods with Dynamo goalie Sergej Babariko facing 30 shots. The All Stars' Dave Dryden, the Oilers' number-one goalie, faced 21.

Larry Hillman, coach of Winnipeg Jets, is handling the all-star squad and termed the game interesting and entertaining.

"We got up quickly but they came back with two well executed plays (for goals)—they made the most of their plays, though.'

The all-star squad was without Nordiques' forward Marc Tardif and Real (Buddy) Cloutier, both of whom are nursing injuries.

Alabama!

The Associated Press

The Crimson Tide of Alabama, conquerors of previously unbeaten Penn State in the Sugar Bowl, avenged last season's disappointing runner-up finish and was named the United States college football national champion for 1978 today by The Associated Press.

In a tight three-way race with Southern California and Oklahoma, Alabama received 38 first-place votes and 1,317 of a possible 1,360 points from a nationwide panel of 68 sportswriters and broadcasters.

Southern Cal which defeated Michigan 17-10 in the Rose Bowl, received 19 first-place votes and 1,285 points. Oklahoma received the remaining 11 first-place votes and 1,251 points.

Alabama, Southern Cal and Oklahoma all trailed top-rated Penn State in the final regular-season poll. But the Nittany Lions slipped from first place to fourth with 1,168 points after Alabama ended its 19-game winning streak. Oklahoma defeated Nebraska in the Orange Bowl 31-24.

Michigan held onto fifth place, Clemson was sixth and Notre Dame seventh.

Southern Cal!

NEW YORK (UPI) — The University of Southern California is the nation's No. 1 college football team but don't try to convince anyone in Alabama of that.

The Trojans won the national title Tuesday by five points over Alabama in the balloting by UPI's board of coaches. Both teams finished with bowl victories but USC beat Alabama in the third game of the season.

That fact didn't seem to mean much to the Alabama fans. The news was hardly out before the tide of protest starting flowing in. While most of the calls were courteous but abrupt, many calls contained messages far too profane to print.

"The State of Alabama is tired of getting trampled on. What's wrong with you people anyway?" shouted an irate woman from Tuscaloosa.

USC, 12-1, collected 496 points from the 35 coaches.

Alabama, 11-1, toppled previously top-ranked Penn State 14-7 in the Sugar Bowl and drew the same number of first place votes as USC — 15 — but failed to achieve as much second place support while drawing 491 points.

Comfort, Communication Shupe's Keys to Success

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Goals are scored on the ice but many hockey games can be won in the dressing room.

And that is where you would have to be if you want to uncover one of the better reasons for Victoria Cougars' winning record for the first half of the Western Hockey League season.

The record wasn't always on the plus side. The won-lost-tied figures were 5-9-1 after the first month of the campaign. Then came the surge and Victoria won 13, lost only four and tied three in the two months before the Christmas break.

The Cougars went over the .500 mark for success — the recognized standard of respectability — despite the absence of defenceman Mark Robinson and centre Geordie Robertson, two of their best.

Their ailing knees have mended and both are due to return to the lineup when Cougars visit Portland Winter Hawks tonight to open the second phase of the season.

That was on the ice.

For a more detailed understanding of the team's success, you would have to visit the Victoria dressing room. That is where the troops and coach Jack Shupe have parlayed comfortable understanding into success.

"Your really have to start with Shupe," says defenceman Todd Morton. "We feel comfortable when he comes into the room. I don't think that was the case last year. We were nervous and Jack, coming to Victoria for the first time, may have been nervous."

Robertson, the team captain, agrees and adds that communication is "as good as it can be. The players all have confidence in him, his system and what he wants to do."

Shupe himself admits to the two Cs — comfort and communication.

"Oh, sure," he said Tuesday. "There is a quite a bit to that, and both ways. Last year (Shupe's first in Victoria after seven years at Medicine Hat), it took time for me to get to know them, and for the players to change over from one system to another.

"Last year there were times when we all treaded on egg-shells.

"But one thing you can't overlook . . . this is a pretty good hockey team, personality-wise as well as in talent.

"As far as personality goes, last year's team and this one are the best clubs I have ever had. I mean that. There isn't one player who even comes close to being branded as 'difficult.' They are extremely level-headed and all very much team players.

"There is no better example than in the one offered through the injuries to Mark and Geordie. That was one of the things that brought them together. They knew they had to put out to make up for the loss of two pretty good hockey players."

Summarizing the first half, Shupe said there were "some disappointments, some surprises."

"Some of our 19-year-olds started slower than I expected," said Shupe. "They knew who they were. As a matter of fact, they would be the first to admit to playing poorly."

Shupe's pleasant surprises were the unexpected strong performances of Morton and the team's five 17-year-old rookies.

About the rookies, Shupe feels "there isn't a team in the league with our kind of strength. It's really something when you can get the kind of hockey that our 17-year-olds have been playing."

The 17-year-olds are Barry Pederson, Brad Palmer, Tony Feltrin, Torrie Robertson and Robert Jacobson.

While the Cougars trail first-place Portland by only three points in the tough Western Division, Shupe candidly admits "it would take some doing" to overhaul the Hawks.

"Portland has 43 games remaining. They could lose 14 and still wind up with 100 points. We have 37 left and would have to win at least 30. Considering Portland's first-half record (19-5-5), it would be a helluva job.

"We're going to take a run at first, but you have to be realistic about it."

Jan Vodila, Josef Metlicka, Milan Razym, Jiri Dudacek and Miroslav Majernik also scored for the Czechs, who outshot Langley 44-19.

Jim Hodge scored for the Canadians at 11:10 of the final period, breaking the shutout bid of Jiri Hamal. Shawn Chisholm and Andy Stewart shared the goaltending duties in the Langley net.

Bruins Finish Fifth

KARLSTAD, Sweden (CP) — Sweden and the Soviet Union qualified for the world junior hockey final Tuesday and New Westminster Bruins completed their schedule in fifth place in the eight-country tournament by defeating the United States 6-3.

The finalists were decided when Sweden defeated Finland 5-2 while the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia tied 2-2. The Swedes, who defeated Canada 1-0 in the preliminary round, have won all five of their tournament games while the tie cost the Russians their first point in five starts.

The Canadians, who missed the championship round when they lost two of their three preliminary games, finished with a 3-2 record over-all by winning both their contests in consolation play.

Dave Orleski scored his first two goals of the tournament against the Americans as the Bruins took advantage of three power-play opportunities to pile up a 5-0 lead before their opponents narrowed the gap by scoring three times in the last five minutes of the second period.

Yvan Joly, Brian Propp, Randy Irving and Brad McCrimmon were the other Canadian marksmen.

West Germany defeated Norway 6-0 in a penalty-filled game to decide seventh place and relegated the losers to the B Division for next year's tournament.

Furious Finish

By Canadian Press

Ontario toyed with its Western Canada opponents for more than 2½ periods Tuesday night and then settled down to business.

What started out as a tightly-played contest turned into a goal-scoring marathon in the final period. The Ontario Major Junior Hockey League all-stars scored six times in the final minutes to defeat the Western Hockey League representatives 10-5 and gain a berth in the international junior tournament final tonight at London, Ont.

Ontario's opponent in the championship game will be the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League all-star squad, walloped 10-4 by Dynamo Riga of the Soviet Union in Tuesday's other game.

Quebec and Ontario completed the round-robin competition with 3-3 records, with Quebec finishing first on the strength of two victories over Ontario. The WHL team was 1-5.

At Kitchener, Ont., the Ontario club led 1-0 and 3-1 by periods before the two teams exploded for 10 goals in the last period.

The West took a 5-4 lead on goals by Dirk Graham and Craig Levie within 10 seconds midway though the third period. But Mike Foligno tied it 5-5 at 11:59 of the third and Ontario went on to score five goals in seven minutes and one second.

Bullets Blast Bulls; Sonics Clip Blazers

By Canadian Press

Washington Bullets are back in first place in the National Basketball Association's Atlantic Division and coach Dick Motta thinks they'll stay there for a while.

"After the way we played tonight, I expect us to have four or five real good games in a row," Motta said Tuesday night following a 109-86 rout of Chicago Bulls. "We had four days off and we needed it.

"We had a lot of little injuries, but they're all healed now. We were quick and our bodies were alive tonight."

The Bullets jumped off to a 21-7 lead and never were threatened as they won their 15th game in 19 starts at home this season. The victory lifted them a game ahead of division-rival Philadelphia '76ers, idle Tuesday.

Elsewhere Tuesday, Milwaukee Bucks defeated Cleveland Cavaliers 116-113, Denver Nuggets edged Kansas City Kings 99-97, Phoenix Suns whipped New York Knicks 114-102, New Orleans Jazz downed Los Angeles Lakers 109-105, Seattle SuperSonics nipped Portland Trail Blazers 109-108 and San Diego Clippers blasted Detroit Pistons 137-119.

Artis Gilmore had 21 points and Mark Landsberger contributed 18 rebounds for Chicago, which carried a two-game winning streak into the contest.

Brian Winters put Milwaukee ahead to stay on a jumper with 1:01 remaining. The Bucks' victory, only their fourth in 21 road games this season, marred a 35-point performance by Cleveland's Campy Russell, who had 16 points in the fourth quarter.

Lars Hansen of Coquitlam, B.C., scored just one point off two free throws, but it proved the difference as Seattle kept within two percentage points of first place in the Pacific Division. The Blazers led 97-89 with 6:30, but Gus Williams started a rally that took the Sonics to a 105-101 lead with 1:32 remaining.

Hansen May Sign Season Contract

SEATTLE (AP) — Canadian Lars Hansen, who has been filling in as a back-up centre for Seattle Supersonics, will probably be signed for the rest of the season, says Lenny Wilkens, coach of the National Basketball Association club.

"The kid is doing a good job for the amount of time he gets," Wilkens said.

The 24-year-old University of Washington student from Coquitlam signed the first of two 10-day contracts with the Sonics on Dec. 15 to replace the injured Tom LaGarde.

Under NBA rules, Wilkens must either sign Hansen to a season contract or cut him after tonight's game against Boston.

The 6-foot-10-inch Hansen had one point in the Sonics 109-108 win over Portland Trailblazers Tuesday. He had been averaging six points and six rebounds a game.

He was a member of the Canadian team which finished fourth at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal. He played two years of pro ball in Italy before returning to the university last fall.

BATTING RECORDS TOPPLED IN TEST

CALCUTTA (CP) — Indian captain Sunil Gavaskar set a test cricket record and shared in another Tuesday as helped his team to a big lead over the West Indies on the fourth day of the third test match between the two countries.

Gavaskar and Dilip Vengsarkar shared an unbeaten 344-run second-wicket stand, the highest in test history, and Gavaskar's 182 not out made him the first player to score centuries in both innings of a test on three occasions.

India declared at 361 for one and the West Indies managed 15 without loss at the close, leaving the visitors a target of 320 for victory on the final day.

Enjoy Winter Season By Hitting Ski Slopes

So you're getting tired of the chilly winter weather?

Instead of complaining — or wishing you were in sunnier climes — why not enjoy what the season has to offer?

Alpine skiing, one of the chief winter pastimes, isn't as hard to master as you might imagine. And the three chief objections to skiing — cost, danger and cold — are really overstated.

Take the cost factor, for instance.

Compared with golf, handing over $7 for an all-day lift ticket is less expensive than paying green fees of $7 weekdays and $15 weekends for an activity that lasts roughly half as long.

Considering you have to pay $3.75 for a two-hour movie or upwards of $10 for a dinner nowadays, the expense of a whole day of skiing is slight.

And, there's no way the cost of skiing comes close to equalling the outlay for motorcamping, saltwater fishing or sailing.

Granted, the transportation costs to reach the ski areas can be high. But, by taking along a few friends and sharing expenses, it's surprising how inexpensive it can be.

As far as danger goes, skiing does have its share of accidents.

But most are caused by carelessness, faulty equipment, fatigue or poor conditioning.

Everyday activities such as driving, walking the streets or even staying at home can also be hazardous.

In terms of safety, alpine skiing must be among the most conscientious of mass-participation sports. Today's release bindings and the vigilance of ski patrollers reduce the risk of serious injury providing the skier doesn't take unnecessary chances.

With the variety of synthetic and natural clothing fibres available today, cold weather can no longer be used as an excuse for avoiding the sport.

In any case, those body-numbing days are few and the lazy t-shirt days of spring skiing atop corn snow in the brilliant sunshine more than make up for the cooler weather sometimes encountered earlier in the season. The crowds, too, seem to melt away in the springtime.

If alpine skiing isn't your forte, try the ever-growing sport of cross-country skiing on the thousands of miles of backroads of Vancouver Island.

Or, in more rugged terrain, opt for snowshoes.

Both are cheaper and more peaceful than alpine skiing but lack the adrenaline rush which comes from a well-executed run at speed down a mountainside.

How about a ski train for the Island?

With a modified schedule during the winter, coupled with a bus service from Courtenay to Forbidden Plateau and Mt. Washington (which is due to open next season), I'm sure a lot of skiiers on the southern end of the Island would opt for a leisurely jaunt by rail rather than face the nearly eight hours of driving time to and from these slopes.

Some bus tie-in could also be arranged to include skiing on Mt. Arrowsmith or Green Mountain.

A similar venture revived last winter from Montreal to the Laurentians ran for eight Sundays and carried over 1,000 people per trip.

This success inspired the organizers to add another train on Saturdays this season to suppliment the regularly-scheduled Friday and Sunday night service.

Ladies Hit Playoff Trail Friday

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

It's ladies first in the New Year's curling stakes with the Lower Island playdowns set for Esquimalt this weekend, beginning Friday at 5:30 p.m.

Twenty rinks have entered the double-loss event which, combined with 21 rinks in the North Island playdowns at Nanaimo, brings to 41 rinks the number chasing the Island district title won last year by Helen Garraway and her Racquet Club foursome.

Helen is back this year but from a different locale and the name is different too. It is now the Helen Mazzei rink from Victoria Clubwith Shirley Gray, Crystal Lockyer and Eileen Williams the new supporting cast.

Meanwhile, two of the members of her last year's rink, Mary Matheson and Shelagh Bell, are also back for another try.

Matheson will skip the Racquet Club foursome with Fernande Hawkes at third, Bell at second and Judy Martell at lead.

Four rinks will qualify for the District finals against the four representative up-Island rinks the following weekend at Playland.

Further draws are scheduled Friday at 8:30 p.m., Saturday at 9 a.m., 1:30 and 7 p.m. and Sunday at 9 a.m., when the A winners will be determined, and 12 and 3 p.m., when the B winners will be decided.

One winner will come out of the District championship at Playland to compete in the provincial eight-rink round-robin championship at McPherson Curling Club, Feb. 2-6. The Heather Haywood rink of Richmond is the defending B.C. champion.

The ladies also will have a different format in the Lassie national championship this year.

Following a round-robin series, four rinks will enter a playoff round which is to be televised from Montreal's Mount Royal Arena. Dates are Feb.21-March 2.

The Island District girls championship will be played in conjunction with the Island Ladies at Playland, Jan. 12-14. Thirteen teams have entered with Sue Holland of Duncan defending.

Meanwhile, the men's Island senior playdowns take place at Powell River, Friday through Sunday, with two of the eight rinks to qualify for the Pacific Coast Curling Association playdowns at Marpole, Jan. 19-21.

Representing the South are four Victoria Club rinks skipped by Dave Johnston, John Innes, Carl Mazzei and George Charles. Qualifying rinks from the North are skipped by Ralph Fulford of Duncan and Nori Nishio, Glen Phillips and Gene Koster of Nanaimo.

Some Judges Will Deal, Some Can be Trapped

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Take it from a man who knows,— politics plays a part in gymnastics.

It may not be as obvious or as widely publicized as in figure skating, for example, but as in any sport that relies on a panel of judges to determine the outcome, it is there.

The man who knows is Peter Kopac, gymnastics coach at the University of Victoria and an accredited international judge.

"In world championships, politics is very important," Kopac said. "Judges from some of the countries go around and say, 'Look, you help my man and I'll help yours.' "

That expression may have an all-too-familiar ring for Canadian figure skating fans, but Kopac cited the case of Nicolai Andrianov of Russia, winner of the men's world championship in Strasbourg, France, in October.

"Andrianov got a 9.9 (out of 10) in floor exercises," Kopac related, "but there was controversy because his routine didn't have a press-to-hand strength movement."

The movement involves pushing away from the mat with the hands, a requirement in any routine.

"Without it," said Kopac, "he couldn't have scored higher than a 9.7."

As you might expect, the countries that produce the world's leading gymnasts also produce the judges, which means that many of them come from the eastern bloc.

Kopac knows of one eastern European judge — he refused to name the country — who lobbied so much for deals with other judges he's no longer trusted.

"I don't think there's as much controvery in gymnastics as in other sports," Kopac said, "certainly not among the men. It's difficult for me to talk about women gymnasts because I don't coach many of them. There may be more controversy in women's competition than men's because there's more leeway for judgment."

Political hanky-panky, however, is not the main reason for those perfect marks gymnasts have been scoring in the last couple of year, including the 10 Romania's Nadia Comaneci got in the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

"When judges start giving high marks in the beginning of a competition, they get trapped," Kopac said. "That's what happened to Nadia in Montreal. She was relatively unknown and was among the last to perform.

There are six gymnasts to a team and another reason for high marks is that many countries now lead off with their best competitor, forcing judges to follow with high marks for the others.

Kopac began judging in 1958 in his native Romania and continued after coming to Canada in 1967. He earned his national coaching credentials in 1971 and his international papers last year. He's one of 18 internationally qualified judges in Canada, of which four are in B.C. — Kopac, Dave Copeland of Nanaimo, Hardy Fink of Port Alberni and John Tutte of Vancouver.

Kopac feels judges are under a lot of pressure.

"It's a case of human nature," he said. "As a judge you can follow maybe 30 routines closely but after that your brain has trouble following. You can be sitting there judging for as much as six hours at a stretch, but your accuracy goes down after about two hours."

Kopac would like to see more specific rules on deducting marks for mistakes made by competitors. As it now stands, deductions can range from 2-10ths to 5-10ths of a point for the same miscue. Specific deductions would go a long way in eliminating the suspicion of foul play by the judges, he feels.

He would also like to see more use of video tapes in evaluating performances

VICTORIA GOLFER FOURTH

TAURANGA, N.Z. (Reuter) — Veteran lefthander Bob Charles shot a closing 71 Tuesday to win the New Zealand Professional Golfers' Association championship with a seven-under-par total of 277.

The New Zealander finished two strokes ahead of Australian Guy Wolstenholme, who had a 72 Tuesday.

Defending-champion Simon Owen of New Zealand, who shared the third-round lead with Charles, shot a 75 to finish with a 281 total.

Another stroke back in fourth place was Canadian lefty Bob Beauchemin of Victoria, who closed with a 73 after earlier rounds of 73, 67 and 69.

Uncertainty Faces Indy 500 Entries

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — What's the Indianapolis 500 without A. J. Foyt, Johnny Rutherford, Gordon Johncock and the Unser brothers?

We may be on the verge of finding out.

Sometime later this month, entry blanks for the 1979 Indianapolis 500 will be going out. The $1.1-million race is scheduled for May 28. The entry blanks are expected to contain drastic rule changes.

The rules will make the 355 cubic-inch engine — the one currently found in most American-made passenger cars — the favored source of power and would restrict power output from the engines used in last year's race "so much that no one would want to bother to run one," said a USAC official.

That will prevent most of the top drivers from competing unless they build all new machinery or drive for someone else, neither of which is likely to happen.

No one is saying what will happen, but one team owner said wearily, "If they want us to run pedal cars at Indianapolis, we'll run pedal cars."

The idea is to lock out the renegade Championship Auto Racing Teams (CART) group, which includes Foyt and most of the top drivers and teams. They broke away from USAC last month.

USAC president Dick King said the exodus of all the major teams in the division removed pressure against changing the rules in favor of the cheaper stock blocks.

King is optimistic that the stock block formula, which will also be the rule in all other USAC-sanctioned Indianapolis car races next season, will be popular.

How popular remains to be seen. Will it be popular enough to attract $2 million worth of new machinery in time for USAC's scheduled season opener March 18 at Ontario, Calif.?

That's the gamble.

If enough cars show up for that race, USAC should have no trouble running two races in April leading up to the Indy 500, and then going on to finish its 10-race schedule. If enough cars don't, the reformulated series will be in trouble.

England Slumps

MELBOURNE (CP) — The English cricket team lost four wickets for eight runs in the last hour of play against Australia Tuesday and slumped to a virtually hopeless position with one day remaining in their third test match.

At close of play, England needed 112 runs to win with only two wickets standing to preserve its record of 10 consecutive tests without defeat.

Australia's scores were 258 and 167, England's were 143 and 171 for eight.

Unseeded Chris Joins Net Greats

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Australian Chris O'Neill outplayed American Betsy Nagelsen to win the Australian Open women's singles tennis crown 6-3, 7-6 today.

The lanky O'Neill, although ranked No. 111 in the world, joins such illustrious tennis names as Evonne Goolagong, Billie Jean King, Margaret Court, Virginia Wade and Maureen Connolly on the winners' cup.

She is the first unseeded player in more than a decade to win the title. The women's winner has been an Australian for the last seven years.

Meanwhile, Guillermo Vilas collected the men's title with a 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 victory over Australian John Marks.

In the semi-finals, Marks outlasted Arthur Ashe of the United States in a marathon battle, 6-4, 6-2, 2-6, 1-6, 9-7.

Viets Cross the Mekong In War Replay

BANGKOK (UPI) — Vietnamese forces deep inside Cambodia have crossed the Mekong River for the first time and laid siege to a key province capital 40 miles from Phnom Penh, a rebel radio station loyal to Vietnam said today.

In the Cambodian capital, defenders at a mass rally vowed to "kill all Vietnamese aggressors."

The rebel radio monitored in Bangkok said anti-government troops, believed to be all or mostly Vietnamese, crossed the Mekong on New Year's Day and laid siege to the city of Kompong Cham.

Kompong Cham controls the vital Route 7 that leads from northeastern Cambodia into Phnom Penh itself.

A commentary by official Radio Phnom Penh called on all Cambodians to unite and to defeat "the Vietnamese expansionist aggressors and their international grandmasters the Soviet Union and countries of the Warsaw Pact."

Cambodia has received aid and assistance from China in its continuing dispute with Vietnam, which draws aid from Moscow.

The pro-Vietnam National United Front for National Salvation radio station said, "Right now, revolutionary troops are in the process of besieging the enemy and putting them to flight.

"Our troops have seized a great number of tanks, armored cars and thousands of heavy and light arms and munitions," the broadcast said.

There was no immediate confirmation of the claim.

Military analysts familiar with Cambodia pointed out the tactic was almost an exact copy of 1970 when Vietnamese troops drove up Highway 7 and continued westward for more than 100 miles to cut off northern Cambodia from Phnom Penh control.

Crossing the Mekong River, intelligence sources said, was a clear sign the drive is aimed at encircling Phnom Penh and weakening the government until it topples.

Cambodian President Khieu Samphan, in a speech to the nation Tuesday, said Vietnamese forces began a new invasion of Cambodia Christmas Day. He said the invasion has pushed up to 50 miles inside Cambodia along a wide front, reaching at one point to within 45 miles of Phnom Penh.

CANADIANS ON LAM

PERTH (AP) — Two young Canadians are on the lam from the law in western Australia because, they say, an airline company is preventing them from paying their court fines.

Gordon Hennebury, 25, an unemployed printer from Toronto, and his wife Bonny, 21, were fined the equivalent of $2,800 Canadian in East Perth police court Nov. 21 after pleading guilty to 58 counts of using false names and obtaining credit from local shops.

The couple went into hiding when they couldn't pay the fines by Christmas Eve.

Hennebury telephoned a local newspaper The Daily News, today to say he had raised half the amount and the rest was tied up in a lost airline ticket.

But the airline told him that he had to wait until Feb. 27 to get a refund.

"Our time to pay the fines has run out and the police can issue a warrant for our arrest at any time," Hennebury said.

A. A. Uren, state manager of Singapore Airlines, said today that it was airline policy to insist on a three-month wait to check thoroughly refund claims.

"We have referred this case to our headquarters in Singapore, but we can do nothing before Feb. 27," he said.

'. . . An Orgy Of Sin, Sex'

LAHORE (UPI) — Police arrested a bevy of film actresses and producers in "an orgy of sin and sex," press reports said Tuesday.

The Urdu language morning daily newspaper Jang said one nude actress fled shrieking through the back door as police smashed through the front entrance of the fashionable Gulberg suburb home of actress Asifa on New Years Eve.

POISON DEATH

LONDON (Reuter) — A British court ruled Tuesday that Bulgarian defector Georgi Markov was murdered last September by an unknown assassin who injected a rare and deadly poison into his leg.

Before he died, Markov, 49, a broadcaster and outspoken critic of the Bulgarian administration, said he had been stabbed with an umbrella in a busy London street.

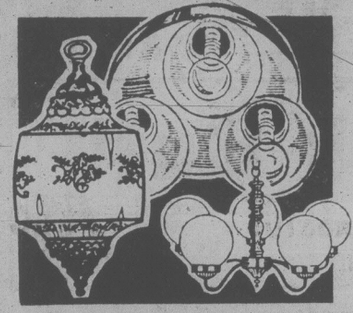

A scientist from Britain's biological and chemical warfare establishment at Porton Down told the court the poison was almost certainly ricin, which comes from the castor oil plant and is twice as poisonous as cobra venom.

Dr. Robert Kelley, a forensic scientist, said the pellet found in Markov's thigh is exactly the same as that taken from another Bulgarian emigre, Vladimir Kostov, in Paris.

Kostov was found dead a week after the Markov killing.

The Lights Go Out On Canada After Dark. . .

TORONTO — Canada After Dark, CBC television's late-night variety show, was put to sleep by the network on Tuesday, the victim of a government-ordered austerity program.

Jack McAndrew, the head of variety programming, said Canada After Dark would cease production on Jan. 26 to give the show's staff 90 days' notice of termination.

MacAndrew said that with CBC budget cuts, the show's $45,000 weekly cost was an unaffordable extravagance. He denied low ratings had anything to do with the demise.

CBC plans for the 1979-80 season do not include a late-night talk show, he added.

The show, with host Paul Soles, was first aired in September, 1978. It succeeded two seasons of 90 Minutes Live, a talk show with Peter Gzowski.

With a fixed cost of $45,000 a week, Canada After Dark was high on the unofficial list of casualties after the federal government told the network to slash its budget last summer.

The show had not fared well in the ratings. The Nielsen survey for November gave it an audience of 120,000 across the country, compared with an audience of about 2.5 million for Hockey Night in Canada and 3.5 million for Happy Days, a top-rated American program on the CBC.

The cancellation affects about 35 people.

Soles was told of the cancellation after a taping of the show last Friday, just a week before he was to begin a week-long holiday in England with his son, Jonathan.

Reached by telephone in London on Tuesday, Soles said he was disappointed but not bitter about the cancellation.

"I like to work," he said. In addition to Canada After Dark, he frequently appears in television dramas and does voices for animated cartoons.

Soles also said he had long expected the axe to fall.

"As a taxpayer, if there's not enough money to do the show properly, it's only right to shut it down," Soles said.

"You take it as it lies," the veteran broadcaster added. "The fact that we had enough good comment and the numbers showed we were reaching the people we wanted is enough satisaction for me that we were doing what the people wanted."

Repeats of this season's shows may continue until Feb. 9. After that, the network will move its later programming ahead by one hour. This scheduling will be altered slightly during the Canada Winter Games, when there will be a 15-minute report in the late-night schedule.

"Soles gave it his best lick, as I did," Gzowski said in an interview. "But being the host of that show is the one job that everybody in Canada is convinced they can do better."

Soles, who sometimes filled in for Gzowski during his stint, took over, the show was cut to an hour, and current affairs were sacrificed to greater emphasis on light entertainment.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Some Americans may benefit from the decline in the Canadian dollar, but not John B. Friend.

On Dec. 6 he opened an account at the Bank of Montreal in Victoria with a $1,000 cheque drawn on a bank back home in Portland, Ore. He described himself as a bank employee, showed some identification, and walked off with the $104 in exchange rate to which he was supposed to be entitled.

Friend couldn't honor the cheque and he got his final dividend on the exchange Tuesday when Judge Blake Allan sentenced him in provincial court to six months for fraud. On the conclusion of his sentence he will be sent back across the border.

Three men and a teenager were remanded to Monday on charges of forcible seizure and assaulting a man.

They were Donald Curan, 23, of 3996 Cedar Hill Rd.; Brent Patriquin, 21, James Scott, 23, and Sam Marra, 18, all of 546 Ellice. Curan was also charged with mischief in connection with damaging a watch.

Joseph P.C. Pigeon, a 19-year-old Esquimalt sailor, was fined $200 after pleading guilty to taking a cab without the owner's consent and $100 for impaired driving on Dec. 23. He was placed on probation for eight months.

Judge Allan was told the driver had left the cab running with the keys in the ignition because he had been having trouble starting it. He was just entering his company office on Esquimalt Road when he noticed his cab heading around the corner. He managed to stop it before it had travelled far.

Thomas F. Ward, address unavailable, was fined $400 and lost his licence for eight months after pleading guilty to dangerous driving.

Court was told that on Oct. 28 a police car pursued Ward at 80 km/h along winding Beach Drive. It was raining and the chase ended with a head-on collision near King George Terrace.

Ward, 20, who came out of the accident with a broken jaw, listened to the evidence and told Judge Allan: "I would like to say I have slowed down considerably."

The judge told him: "You won't be driving for some time — I can tell you that."

Robert Taylor of Edmonton was fined $500 after pleading guilty to impaired driving.

Police said the 20-year-old drove the wrong direction along one-way Pandora Avenue early New Year's day, then did the same on Johnson, another one-way street.

Taylor was placed on probation for six months and must take the impaired driver's course when he returns home.

Just A Dash Of Sex What's Needed

WASHINGTON — Americans apparently like a little sex and violence in their movies, but not too much.

There have been more R-rated movies made in the United States over the past nine years than any other kind. Those blush-producing X-rated flicks have been the rarest.

A commerce department report released Tuesday said the movie industry's rating system had judged the contents of 1,275 feature films in the past nine years.

Of that total, 18 per cent were G-rated for a general audience; 37 per cent PG-rated, meaning parental guidance is suggested; 39 per cent R-rated, open only to adults or to youngsters accompanied by an adult, and just 6 per cent X-rated, restricted to those 18 or older.

The report said the U.S. movie industry experienced a banner year during 1978, with gross box office receipts 18 percent above 1977 receipts, and 1979 is expected to be even better.

The Net Value Of a Wife. . .

DES MOINES — How much is a wife and mother worth — in dollars and cents?

The Iowa Legislature may be asked this session whether this question should be allowed to go to Iowa's courts.

"We've been trying for five years to get the Legislature to mandate that the value of a homemaker be considered in figuring the settlement of a divorce case and that the woman get greater consideration in such cases," said Sue Follon of the Iowa Commission on the Status of Women.

At present, she said there is nothing requiring the worth of a wife to be considered by the courts in determining property settlements and benefits for the families.

Ms. Follon said this "worth" has been computed to have values ranging from $11,000 to $17,000 a year.

"It is a major issue," she said, "one which we have been trying to get through the Legislature five times."

Ms. Follon said some courts in Iowa already have done this on an individual case basis.

"One has even used testimony of a woman as an expert witness in the case to decide it in a more equitable basis," she said.

The problems with the concept during the last session were predominantly political, she said.

"It had a supportive committee, but a non-supportive subcomittee head," Ms. Follon said.

Another now-familiar issue, a proposed state Equal Rights Amendment, also will be back in the legislature this year, and Ms. Follon predicted fairly quick action in both the House and the Senate.

AN INSANITY PLEA SET FOR VICIOUS

NEW YORK — Punk rocker Sid Vicious will plead insanity when he stands trial for the murder of his girlfriend, says his lawyer. James Merberg told reporters of his plans Tuesday as he entered state Supreme Court in Manhattan where Vicious was arraigned on an unrelated assault charge. Vicious, whose real name is John Simon Ritchie, pleaded not guilty to assaulting Todd Smith, brother of singer Patti Smith, with a broken beer mug in a Manhattan discotheque Dec. 6. The alleged assault occured while Vicious, former bass guitarist of the Sex Pistols punk rock group, was free on $50,000 bail on charges of murdering his girl-friend, Nancy Spungen, in their New York hotel last Oct. 11.

NEW YORK — A 71-year-old woman is on trial on charges of plotting to murder a state Supreme Court judge and then kidnap her 81-year-old former husband to whom the judge granted a divorce. Maria Petra Ramsay went on trial Tuesday in Manhattan Supreme Court on charges of conspiring to murder John Skahen, a state Supreme Court justice sitting in Rockland County, who granted the divorce in 1975.

CARSON CITY, Nev. — Comedian George Kirby may be behind bars, but he is still practising his art. Kirby, 51, serving a 20-year term on charges of selling heroin, put on a New Year's weekend show for inmates at a medium-security prison. He said in an interview, "I have no hate; I have no ill feelings, not in my heart. I want to do my time as comfortably as I can, pay my debt and return to my work." The entertainer hopes to eventually be sent to a federal prison in California where he may be allowed to make public appearances.

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The road from Columbus to Capitol Hill and back again was marred by scandal, but freshman Representative Wayne Hays says he's glad to be back in political harness and ready to tackle even the lowliest committee post in the Ohio general assembly. Hays, sworn in to the state legislature Tuesday, resigned from Congress in 1976 after serving 28 years. His resignation was sparked by his affair with Elizabeth Ray. "I told the speaker to put me on any committee he couldn't get anybody else to serve on," said Hays.

NEW YORK - Thursday marks the 1,634th performance of The Wiz on Broadway, and if cast and audiences aren't worn out, almost everything else is. Somebody recently hooked Stephanie Mills up to a pedometer, just to see how far she's really walking down that Yellow Brick Road in her starring role. It comes out three miles a performance, for a total hike to date of 4,500 miles. No wonder she's worn out 22 pairs of ruby slippers. Ken Prymus has worn out 14 lion suits as the Cowardly Lion, and so far, the production has used up 19,608 green balloons, 288 pairs of sunglasses, 1,040 pounds of glitter, 180,000 sequins and 400 pounds of "jewels."

NEW YORK - Newsweek magazine predicts another financial bonanza for ex-Nixonian John Ehrlichman — out of jail, his Watergate conviction behind him. His latest novel — The Whole Truth — is due for hard-cover publication in May and the magazine says it's already a money-maker that may top his first effort, The Company. Book-of-the-Month Club has bought it, TV and film producers are dickering for it and Newsweek says paperback bids alone could hit $500,000.

Light of Her Life

Pat Boone's 22-year-old daughter — a Grammy winner for her hit You Light Up My Life — says she'll marry Ferrer, also 22, sometime this year.

He's the son of Jose Ferrer and Rosemary Clooney, and a student at Pepperdine University.

Jury Acquits 'Mastermind' In Marion Kidnapping

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Valence, the man the Crown painted as the mastermind of the Charles Marion kidnap affair, has been found not guilty of kidnapping and three other charges.

A jury of seven women and four men Tuesday found Valence, 45, guilty of only one charge—attempted extortion against the credit union in Sherbrooke, Que., where Marion worked as loans manager until his abduction on Aug. 6, 1977.

Marion remained hidden for 82 days, reappearing only after his family paid a ransom of $50,000. Apart from a sex-related kidnapping in British Columbia several years ago, it was the longest abduction in Canadian history.

Under strict orders from Mr. Justice Marc Beauregard of Quebec Superior Court, spectators in the courtroom remained silent as the jury foreman read the verdicts. Valence, stony-faced, stared intently at his wife, who sat trembling.

But once outside, friends and members of the Valence family cheered and wept for joy, embracing 32-year-old lawyer Jean-Pierre Rancourt who won acquittals for Valence on charges of kidnapping, conspiracy to kidnap, forcible detention and extortion against Marion.

"It always seemed possible that the impossible would happen," said Valence's wife, Jeanne, as she celebrated with friends and relatives. "He had no criminal record, and he was a good family man. His place is at home, not in prison."

But Valence, a former game warden and woodlot evaluator, remains in prison, and faces a sentence of up to 14 years in a hearing set for Thursday.

The verdict completes a trial that lasted three months, hearing 95 witnesses and gathering 262 pieces of evidence. The jury deliberated through the New Year's weekend, sitting six days before agreeing on the verdicts.

The 12th member of the jury, a man with a chronic heart ailment, collapsed under the strain Monday and had to be excused.

Rancourt leaned heavily on the suggestion that Marion, now 59, may have had a part in the affair, hoping to cash in on the original $1-million ransom demand against his employers.

Although Marion denied this strenuously, a seed of doubt was planted in the jurors' minds by testimony that the victim showed few physical marks from the chains that he said bound his ankles and neck during the 82 days he was held in a tiny cavern in the southeastern Quebec countryside.

Marion testified that he remembered hearing distant train whistles but not heavy trucks that passed near the hideout. The court also heard from witnesses who said they saw a man they recognized as Marion wandering freely during the period of his supposed captivity.

Crown prosecutor Pierre Sauve said it would be up to the department of justice to decide whether to appeal the verdicts.

Nor could he say if charges would be reopened against Mrs. Valence, 43, who was tried jointly with her husband but saw the charges against her suspended two months into the trial.

Still to face trial are Valence's alleged co-conspirators, Michel De Varenne, 36, and Rene Chalifoux, 52. Also facing charges is Louise Beaubien, 26.

N.B. Families Soaked

FREDERICTON (CP) — Two Fredericton men in their early 20s have been in jail, at their families' expense, for almost two months in Mexico and they may be there considerably longer before they come to trial, a Fredericton lawyer says.

Patrick Ryan said Tuesday that he is representing Eric Aijo, who with Ralph Welch is facing a narcotics charge in Mexico, but all he can do is arrange payments to Mexican authorities to provide some comforts for the prisoner.

Ryan said Mexican law allows accused persons to be held up to a year before they come to trial and Mexican authorities do not provide a bed, food, blankets or clothes to prisoners.

He said their is no guarantee that money paid by the families actually goes to the prisoners.

He said Canada is negotiating an agreement with Mexico to have Canadian prisoners in Mexico get the same treatment that they would get in their own country. The agreement would also provide for prisoner exchanges.

B.C., Alberta Group Eyes West Coast Air Purchase

A second attempt by western Canadian investors to acquire a B.C. airline is under way.

The firm being wooed by the unidentified group of B.C. and Alberta businessmen is West Coast Air Services, the largest private charterer on the Pacific Coast north of California.

West Coast president Al Michaud of Vancouver said there are no obstacles to closing the transaction as far as his firm is aware, pending audits and government approval.

The same group of industrialists earlier tried to buy AirWest Airlines in a deal subsequently turned down by AirWest president Norman Gold.

Michaud said today the would-be buyers consist of "substantial people" including some with oil interests who are looking for ways to broaden their investment base. They have no previous experience in the flying industry.

Michaud, who is, along with his brother Lloyd (chairman of the company), the major shareholders of West Coast, said they are serious about selling the firm.

A cash sum is involved in the offer, which has a Feb. 1 deadline.

Michaud said there also are tentative plans to expand West Coast using existing management and personnel.

At present, West Coast goes no further north than Ocean Falls on the mainland. The company serves most of Vancouver Island and has charter bases at Vancouver, Nananimo and Ocean Falls, with scheduled runs serving Victoria, the Gulf Islands, Vancouver, Namu, Bella Bella, Bella Coola, Ocean Falls, Tahsis and Tofino.

West Coast has about 26 aircraft, mostly single engine float planes including six Beavers, a single Otter and 10 or 12 Cessnas. In addition it flies four twin Otters, four Mallards and a Navaho Chieftain.

Pianist Al Smith Dies Here at 76

Smith, who entertained hundreds of community groups free of charge over the years with his piano playing, was a former local and international president of the Lions Club.

He was associated for many years with radio station CJVI and through the war years, was both entertainer and sales manager at the station.

He was widely known for his entertainment on a 1956-66 breakfast wakeup show at the station.

Born in England, he served with the Regina Rifles in the Second World War.

He is survived by his widow, Dorothy; stepson, Barry Allin, with the RCAF in Belgium; step-daughters, Marie Hendricks, Ottawa, and Marjorie Arnesen, Las Vegas, Nevada; eight step-grandchildren, and sisters-in-law, Mrs. Bessie Thurston, North Vancouver, and Mrs. Clarice Smith in England.

SMOKING BLAMED

Careless smoking is believed to have caused a $1,000 fire Tuesday evening in a storage locker on the third floor of the Orangewood Manor apartments, 4026 Quadra.

A Saanich fire department spokesman said the two floors below received some water damage.

He said the fire, detected at about 5:30 p.m., apparently started among some Christmas decorations.

Firemen speculate ash from a cigarette dropped on the decorations while the tenant was putting them away.

Flood Hits Glengarry Extension

One of the sprinkler lines in the new 150-bed extension to Glengarry Extended Care Hospital, 1780 Fairfield, froze and burst on Monday, causing damage to one of the rooms.

Plant services co-ordinator Bert Harrison said today the amount of the damage has not been tabulated, adding that Farmer Construction Ltd. is carrying out repairs.

Harrison said the incident will not affect the official opening of the extension Friday at 2 p.m. with Health Minister Bob McClelland officiating.

Saanich Agenda Ads

Saanich council decided Tuesday night to follow the example of the city of Victoria in advertising council meeting agendas, and perhaps agenda items for committee meetings as well.

Aldermen approved a $2,000 budget for that purpose.

The idea was suggested by Ald. Irene Block, who said she was impressed by the city's recent policy of placing newspaper ads to inform residents about items to be discussed at meetings.

Although he supported the proposal, Mayor Mel Couvelier commented: "It would be nice if the publishers would do this as a public service."

More Fire Deaths Predicted

Native Indian communities can expect more house fire fatalities this winter, an Indian spokesman has warned.

Bob Warren, a director of United Native Nations, predicted the deaths as he announced a fund drive to assist the survivors of a Christmas eve blaze that destroyed the home of Bill Williams and took the lives of his wife and four children at Port Renfrew.

Warren said society treats native requirements as welfare instead of giving priority to improved housing, health and education.

"Every winter, poor housing conditions on reserves present hazards to far too many families," Warren said.

"Often, two or three families are forced to live in two or three-room tarpaper shacks without proper heating, plumbing or electricity."

The Port Renfrew fire was believed started by a portable oil heater.

Famous New England Supper

When the evenings lengthen and the moon rides high, it is high time for the famous New England supper. When the weather is right, our friends like it served outside. The choice can be garden, camp or cottage and with plenty of iced tea, the favorite beverage. Today's great insulated containers and thermos types certainly make outdoor meals simpler. And, you will notice that these particular recipes were designed to save kitchen time.

The Boston Brown Bread is steamed. That is why this type of bread is so deliciously moist and chewy. And you can forget the old, long baking time with this Bean and Wiener Casserole. The canned beans have already been baked so the dish needs only forty minutes oven time. The traditional salad is a Creamy Cole Slaw and simply made with Canada's fresh green cabbage plus a dash of this and that.

Enjoy the famous New England supper Boston Brown Bread, Bean and Wiener Casserole and Creamy Cole Slaw. This feast would not have remained so popular for so many years if it hadn't been so good.

BOSTON BROWN BREAD

1 cup yellow ground cornmeal
1 cup rye flour
1 cup graham flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups buttermilk
¾ cup molasses

Combine cornmeal, rye flour, graham flour, baking soda and salt in a large mixing bowl. Combine buttermilk, molasses and raisins. Add liquids to the dry ingredients and combine well. Pour batter into two greased 1-quart size pudding moulds or fill two-greased 1-pound size cans, three-quarters full.

Cover with greased lids or with heavy greased aluminum foil; tie or tape lids on so rising bread does not break the seal. Steam over low heat in 1-inch of water 3 hours — adding water as necessary, during steaming time.

BEAN AND WIENER CASSEROLE

2 cans (19 oz. ea.) baked beans
½ cup table cream
1 medium onion, diced
4 strips bacon, diced
10 wieners, cooked

Combine beans, cream, onion and bacon gently; turn into a 1½ quarts casserole. Arrange wieners in a circle on top. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375°F) until heated through — about 40 minutes.

Makes 6 servings.

CREAMY COLE SLAW

4 cups shredded green cabbage
½ cup shredded green pepper
2 pimentos, diced
½ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
2 teaspoons lime or lemon juice
Dash Tabasco sauce
¼ teaspoon celery seed
Salt and pepper to taste

Toss cabbage, green pepper and pimento together. Combine mayonnaise or salad dressing, lime or lemon juice, Tabasco sauce, celery seed and salt and pepper. Add to cabbage mixture and toss lightly. place in a covered container and chill.

Makes 6 servings.

Saturday night fever is home-baked beans and Boston brown bread

Outguess The Chef

This time it's the Germans who have a word for it. Or, rather, three words. Gut essen gehen. Dining out well. Which is what everyone wants when patronizing an eating establishment.

Of course, most people like Gut Essen zu hause as well. It's delightful to get a good dish in the restaurant, but it's fun when you can figure out in general how the chef made it so you can prepare it at home. Then you will be dining well at home, as well.

Most chefs are quite secretive about their recipes, however, and there might just be one ingredient that makes the difference between excellent and mediocrity. It's usually a subtle taste that can't be readily identified. One only knows that the dish is particularly delicious. What makes it so?

One such secret that has been passed around by word of mouth until it's not a secret anymore is the use of Angostura aromatic bitters in cooking. Especially in meat cookery. Professional chefs were the first to discover this secret. Because Angostura is both a flavoring and a seasoning agent it did rather remarkable things for many dishes. Best of all, it made the chef's creation unique.

This German recipe definitely makes a gut essen gehen dish. Rouladen are popular as an eating-out menu item, especially in the inns and restaurants around Berlin. But know that you now can make it zu hause. This recipe was developed by Ruth Lundgren.

Angostura Beef Rolls

2 lb. round steak, cut (.64 cm.) ¼" thick
1 large dill pickle, cut lengthwise
2 onions, thinly sliced
salt and pepper
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 cup water
1 tbsp. prepared mustard
2 tsp. Angostura aromatic bitters
1 tsp. paprika
2 slices lemon
½ cup dry white wine
1 cup tomato juice
¼ cup flour

Cut round steak into 8 pieces and pound each piece flat until paper thin. Place 1 strip pickle, 1 slice onion and 1 slice bacon on meat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper; roll up and fasten with toothpick. In (25 cm.) 10" fry pan, brown rolls in hot butter on all sides.

Add all remaining ingredients except flour; cover and simmer one hour or until meat is tender. Remove lemon slices. Mix flour to a smooth paste with (125 ml.) ½ cup pan liquid; stir into remaining sauce until slightly thickened. Serve with noodles or hash browned potatoes.

Makes 4 servings.

MACARONI IN THIS SALAD

3 cups cooked spiral or elbow macaroni
6 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
3 ounces cheddar cheese, cubed
1 cup thinly-sliced celery
1 cup mayonnaise
2 tbsp. finely-chopped green onion
½ tsp. dry mustard
½ tsp. salt
3 tbsp. toasted silvered almonds (optional)
lettuce leaves

Combine eggs, cheese, celery, mayonnaise, onion, dry mustard and salt. Stir in macaroni. Sprinkle with almonds; chill. Serve on lettuce leaves.

Delicious New Ways to Serve Veggies

Vegetables simply cooked and in salads will be a welcome part of suppers and dinners this month for one reason or another. Even those not usually interested in simple fare are likely to enjoy the basic flavors of locally available or locally grown beets, parsnips, Jerusalem artichokes, imported spinach or home grown Swiss chard, and winter squash.

Using these vegetables in new delicious ways while youngsters are home from school will introduce them to a lot of good foods. Let them select a choice from colors, and show them how to prepare for cooking, and have them take a part in chopping and grating for salads.

First let us make a salad using the tuberous rooted Jerusalem artichokes. These can also be eaten without cooking; just scrub and perhaps lightly shave off some of the skin before eating like a radish with a little salt, or with grated cheese. The artichoke has a mild but deliciously crisp flavor and the crispness comes from the juices as in a Mackintosh apple.

Or make Artichoke Salad with other ingredients. Quantities according to number of servings.

Jerusalem Artichoke Salad

Jerusalem Artichokes
Sunflower oil
Lemon juice
Celery stick with leaves
Parsley
Chives or a little onion

Scrub artichokes clean. If not larger than a small egg, boil whole starting with cold water to barely cover. Add a few grains of salt; bring to boil and simmer for 10 or 12 minutes until becoming tender. The tubers should still be crisp.

Drain, keeping the liquid for soup or sauce. Carefully remove thin outer peel while still very warm. Slice about ¼-inch thick into a bowl.

Dribble drops of sunflower oil (or other light vegetable oil) over the slices, followed by fresh lemon juice. Turn gently with two forks to coat all pieces.

Slice celery thinly; cut celery leaves, parsley and chives very fine. Add to artichokes. Sprinkle with few grains of sugar and salt — very little is needed or flavors will be lost.

Turn again with forks, cover and set aside, not chilled, to serve with sandwiches of cheese, cold meats, or hard boiled eggs.

This salad has an unusual but delicious flavor and texture. Made in quantity and served from a big bowl or on a large platter with an assortment of sandwiches it makes fine party fare for any age from pre-teens up to whatever may be the limiting age for enjoyment of new and interesting foods.

Next is a colorful salad using beets which have a sweet flavor at this time of year which tomatoes lack in winter. And their color is a brilliant accessory to any salad.

Beet and Celery Salad

500 ml sliced, cooled beets
250 ml thin sliced celery with leaves
15 ml lemon juice
45 ml sunflower (or other) oil
A few grains of salt and sugar
2 eggs, hard boiled, pushed through sieve

Lay beet slices in overlapping circle on large plate. Centre with celery. Beat oil with lemon juice, salt and sugar in a cup and dribble over all.

Sprinkle with sieved eggs. Add homemade yogurt in spoonfulls so it can be taken up in each serving.

These amounts will serve four as a side dish. Canned beets may be used if more convenient but will of course add to the cost of the meal. If beets are bought, choose small sizes for they take less time to cook. Keep cooking water for soup or gravy.

A most appetizing flavor is developed in parsnips when cooked in a little margarine, slightly browned and served with other delicately flavored foods.

Skillet of Parsnip and Spinach

750 ml parsnip thin sliced
50 ml sweet onion thin sliced
30 ml soft margarine
500 ml cut up fresh spinach OR Swish chard
Few grains salt and paprika

Melt margarine in skillet having a lid. Spread onion slices in skillet to cook until transparent. Push to one side.

Arrange parsnip slices in pan, adding a little more margarine if needed. Cover, and cook gently until becoming soft. Turn slices, pushing the browned ones into a heap with the onion. Spread others out to get brown on one side.

After 5 minutes, push parsnips aside, add cut-up spinach or chard, put lid on to keep in all steam from moist greens to finish cooking of parsnips. Gently cook for 5 more minutes. Turn off heat.

Have ready the heated plates, with either hot cooked brown rice or a thick slice of lightly toasted wholewheat bread.

Serve portions of each vegetable to each plate, pouring accumulated juices over all. Sprinkle lightly with a few grains of salt and paprika.

The preparation and cooking time for this delicious dish is less than a half hour. If rice is wanted, plan to either have the required amount left from a previous cooking and needing only heating, or use the toast idea so long as you use a whole grain bread.

Just one more salad of the most economical kind, since only small quantities of the four main ingredients are needed.

By increasing the amount of the one you have plenty of, the total can be comfortably stretched to serve unexpected extra visitors. And yet total cost is kind to the after-Christmas food budget. This is just good Eastern Canadian Cole Slaw.

Quantities to suit number of servings needed.

Budget Cole Slaw

Wedge of green cabbage or Chinese cabbage
Mackintosh or Delicious apple
Celery stick with leaves
Seedless raisins or chopped dates
Grated carrot
Grated Cheddar Cheese
Homemade plain yogurt

Place a quantity of homemade yogurt, about a half cup for 4 servings, in a bowl. Stir to soften to a thick cream.

Prepare vegetables and fruits by either slicing thinly or grating finely (carrots), dropping each into the yogurt at once to coat pieces. This prevents further loss of vitamins. A spoonful of lemon juice increases the effect.

This salad goes with practically anything, meat or fish leftovers; or with more cheese; with hot wheat pancakes for a complete meal.

Although vegetables (unless you grow your own) are no longer low priced food, they are a healthful investment especially in winter.

By L. L. Coleman, MD

I have cataracts in my eyes. I never realized that so many people had this condition until I started to talk about it. Everyone has his own idea about what kind of operation I should have. Is any one better than the others? — Mr. J.E.R.

Dear Mr. R.:

The past 10 years have brought many new radical departures from the standard method of removing cataracts, the surgical techniques have become so sophisticated and varied that ophthalmologists (eye specialists) are not all fixed on one definite procedure.

Two specialized operations, known as "phacoemulsification" and "phacofragmentation," are gaining increasing acceptance by surgeons. Patients are the beneficiaries of these refined techniques because they reduce the time of convalescence.

Another technique is one in which an artificial plastic lens is immediately inserted at the time that the cataractous lens is removed. This gives the patient an advantage in that the need for thick spectacles is avoided after surgery.

These are only a few of the variations that are now being successfully used in specially chosen cases. And "specially" chosen cases is the key to the answer to your question. Every patient must be carefully evaluated before the ideal procedure is selected. There are no universal answers to all cataract problems for all people. For some, the standard operation that has been used so successfully for many years has its own advantages over the newer types of surgery. Each operation, so carefully tailored, has its advantages and disadvantages. Only when these are carefully balanced can the eye surgeon choose the ideal operation for each patient.

What foods should be avoided for somebody who has low blood sugar? — Miss S.S.

Dear Miss S.:

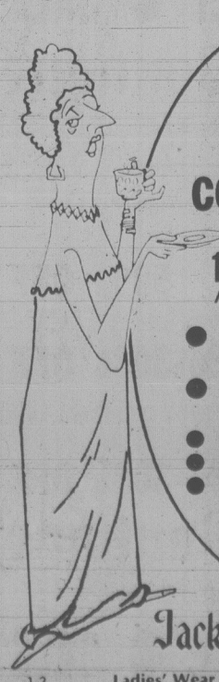

You did not indicate in your letter if the diagnosis of hypoglycemia, or low blood sugar, has been definitely established by the specific tests that are now available. Far too many people "think" they have low blood sugar because it has captivated the imagination of so many people who, indeed, do not have it.

If you truly have hypoglycemia, you should avoid chocolate, honey, candy, ice cream, pastries, syrupy canned fruit, beer, wine and alcohol. Strong tea and coffee, too, should be avoided. In general, foods you can include in your diet are nuts, cheese, fish, meat and poultry. Avocados, green leafy vegatables, cauliflower, peas and beans, oranges and grapefruit are also excellent.

Note that the diet should be high in protein and low in sugar. The true symptoms of hypoglycemia may resemble many others. Therefore, guessing that you have hypoglycemia imposes on you a burden you may not need to carry. If you have not already done so, visit your doctor and find out for sure.

Almond Cream Torte a headliner for any Dessert Party

Say 'Come For Dessert'

cooking with kay

By KAY SPICER

Delight your friends with a dessert party. It's become a popular way to entertain. Not only is it easier than a dinner party, it's more economical and great fun.

Invite as few or as many guests as you wish. Invitations that read "come for dessert" are irresistible.

No menu is needed. Simply make several delectable desserts. With these serve an assortment of special cookies, cake, nuts and fruit. Such a glamorous array is sure to impress your guests.

For drinks set out decanters of sweet cream sherry and tawny port. At room temperature, on the rocks or frappe style over crushed ice, these fortified wines are perfect for slow sipping with sumptuous creations. The usual serving of dessert wine is 3 ounces. An all-purpose, stemmed wine glass can be used but fill only about half full. Place an urn of coffee, with cream and sugar, and cups on a side board for those who like the brew with sweet treats.

ALMOND CREAM TORTE
(Makes 10-12 servings)

- 1 envelope (1 tablespoon) unflavored gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- ¾ cup Almond Cream
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- Dash of salt
- 1 pint (10 ounces) whipping cream (35%), whipped
- 1 10-inch baked angel food or chiffon cake
- 1 cup slivered almonds, toasted

Soften gelatin in cold water five minutes. Heat Almond Cream to simmering; add gelatin, sugar and salt. Stir until dissolved. Cool then chill in refrigerator until mixture begins to thicken. Fold in whipped cream. Cut cake across into three layers. Put cake layers together with part of filling between layers; spread remaining filling over top and sides of cake. Pat toasted almond slivers around sides and top of cake. Serve on pedestal plate, if possible.

A beautiful Buche de Noel will add a touch of old world charm to a dessert table. This traditional French Christmas Log Cake is truly elegant but surprisingly easy to make — it's as spectacular to taste as it is to look at.

The foundation of the delightful dessert is a good jelly roll, plain or chocolate. It is filled, rolled, assembled and frosted. Garnished with meringue mushrooms, it will look like a piece of sculpture.

You'll probably enjoy producing the unique mushrooms. Give the extras as a gift. They look perky and irresistible tucked in a box lined with crushed tissue.

MERINGUE MUSHROOMS

Makes 24 small-to-medium mushrooms.

- 3 egg whites
- ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
- ¾ cup icing sugar, sifted
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- ¼ teaspoon almond extract
- Cocoa
- 2 squares (2 ounces) semi-sweet chocolate

Grease and four two baking sheets. Knock off excess flour. Or line pans with brown paper or parchment.

Place egg whites in mixing bowl; beat until foamy. Add cream of tartar; continue to beat until whites stand in soft peaks.

Add sugar gradually until whites are glossy, very thick and form stiff peaks. Beat in vanilla and almond extract. Fit a pastry bag with a ½-inch tube (No. 5). Fill bag with meringue mixture.

Squeeze little domes onto baking sheet for mushroom tops. (If caps have points on them, press points flat with a moistened finger.) Pipe little stems drawing tube along pan, about 1-1½ inches long.

Sprinkle lightly with cocoa. Bake in a preheated 200°F oven (no warmer) about 1½ hours until crisp and firm. Allow to cool overnight in oven with door closed.

To assemble mushrooms:

Melt chocolate and allow to cool a little. Pierce a little hole in the bottom of the dome with the end of a knife; dip the stem into melted chocolate then fit top and stem together. Allow to cool upside down.

Mushrooms can be made a few days in advance if stored in air-tight bags or tins.

Wanted: Nutrition Specialists

eating right

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

If the number of inquiries we receive is any indication, there is a need for a medical specialty in nutrition. As far as we know there is none. Some medical colleges include nutrition in their programs of study. These range from a few lectures to a single term course. Even if he chose to, a graduating doctor could not go on to a nutrition specialty, the same way he could go on to specialize in obstetrics, surgery or dermatology.

How responsive would the medical profession be to a consumer demand for a medical service such as nutrition counselling? This is a difficult question for the medical establishment.

Through advances in nutrition sciences in the past several decades, most nutritional deficiency diseases, such as beri-beri, pellagra and scurvy, have been eliminated in affluent countries like ours. We are now discovering a new area of malnutrition, where dietary excesses and imbalances contribute to diseases that fall within existing medical specialities, such as cardiology (for coronary heart disease), oncology (for cancer) and internal medicine (for such diseases as diabetes). Rather than establish a new medical speciality in nutrition, it could be desirable to provide nutrition counselling as a medical service to several existing specialties.

It is astonishing that there is delay in introducing such a service to the health care system. There is need for it. The consumer of medical services is aware of the need; to request it; and yet, it is seldom available.

The inquiries we get are, "Do you know of any doctors who deal with nutrition problems?" Our answer: "Your family doctor or any specialist should refer you for nutrition counselling if and when you need it. Discuss this matter with your doctor." In most provinces, nutrition counselling is an insurable service, if provided in a hospital. We suspect that such gestures on the part of the health insurance schemes in the various provinces work an paper, but not in practice. The only exception is probably for the group subscribers of the Manitoba Blue Cross program, who are receiving this service on a trial basis.

Our answer to our readers' inquiries of nutrition-minded doctors is not satisfactory but we do not know of any other. The only medical doctors who are knowledgeable in the field of nutrition are based in medical colleges. They devote most of their time to teaching and research rather than practice. They are few in number and cannot possibly cope with the demand.

On the other hand, there are some practising physicians who exploit the interest of the public nutrition. Since these doctors are equipped with a medical degree, their services are covered by health insurance plans. Even some chiropractors, whose services are often covered by health insurance, indulge in providing nutrition therapy. The lack of nutrition qualifications in many of these cases makes the medical profession rather nervous about these practioners.

It is difficult for the average Canadian to know where to turn. Where do you go to find a doctor who is willing to listen to your concern about something so basic to our well-being as your diet, and give you useful advice, or proper referral?

First, learn all you can about what might be ailing you. Ask your doctor all kinds of questions; do not be shy. Ask your doctor for the name of a good book on the subject. If nutrition enters into it, request a referral for nutrition counselling at the Out-Patient Department of the local hospital. Talk to the nutritionist of the dietitian there. Again, ask for information and for books and pamphlets to read.

Do not trust a book on the newsstand with a title that appears to deal with your problem, unless the book has been recommended by a qualified nutritionist or dietitian. There are many unreliable books on the market.

Second, contact any professional association that might be concerned with your specific problem. Think of the Canadian Diabetic Association if you are diabetic, the Allergy Information Association if you are alergic, the Migraine Foundation if you are migrainous, and so on. The Canadian Dietetic Association, or the provincial dietetic associations, are good contacts. They often sponsor programs, such as Dial-a Dietitian, to answer your questions.

Third, contact the appropriate persons in the local health unit or the provincial health department. The communituy nutritionist in the health unit is a valuable resource person to answer your questions to the provincial nutritionists.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Last year you published a set of New Year's resolutions. I cut it out and taped it to my bathroom mirror where I could read it every morning. I can truthfully say that I am a much better person today because I've tried to live by those rules.

Please run that column again for those who may have missed it. I hope it will do for others what it has done for me.

In case you're wondering, I'm no teenager. I'm a 34-year-old father of three.

HIGH ON LIFE

DEAR HIGH: Don't thank me. The credit belongs to Overeaters Anonymous—an organization of caring, confessed compulsive eaters who have regained their self-esteem by losing weight, feeling better, looking better and helping others to do the same.

Their credo:

—Just for today I will try to live through this day only, and not set far-reaching goals to try to overcome all my problems at once. I know I can do something for 12 hours that would appall me if I felt that I had to keep it up for a lifetime.

—Just for today I will try to be happy. Abraham Lincoln said. "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." He was right. I will not dwell on thoughts that depress me. I will chase them out of my mind and replace them with happy thoughts.

—Just for today I will adjust myself to what is. I will face reality. I will try to change those things which I can change and accept those things I cannot change.

—Just for today I will try to improve my mind. I will not be a mental loafer. I will force myself to read something that requires effort, thought and concentration.

—Just for today I will exercise my soul in three ways: I will do a good deed for somebody—without letting him know it. (If he or she finds out I did it, it won't count.) I will do at least two things that I know I should do, but have been putting off. I will not show anyone that my feelings are hurt; they may be hurt, but today I will not show it.

—Just for today I will be agreeable. I will look as well as I can, dress becomingly, talk softly, act courteously, and speak ill of no one. Just for today I'll not try to improve anybody except myself.

—Just for today I will be unafraid. I will gather the courage to do what is right and take the responsibilities for my own actions. I will expect nothing from the world, but I will realize that as I give to the world, the world will give to me.

It makes sense, doesn't it? And so does their program. It's free. For information about this wonderful organization, write to P.O. Box 6190, Torrance, Calif. 90504.

P.S. Have a happy, healthy New Year. And pray for peace!

LOVE, ABBY

Refrigerating shrimp beforehand leaves time to entertain

Individual Servings Make This Shrimp Dish Handy

This Shrimp Imperial recipe is an ideal choice when a convenient main dish is needed for home entertaining. Baked in single servings, it can be prepared ahead of time and refrigerated, giving the host or hostess extra time with guests.

The pre-cooked shrimp is surrounded by a creamy mixture of mayonnaise and tomato juice with green pepper. It is then topped with crushed corn flakes and slivered toasted almonds before baking.

When crushed and buttered, corn flakes are a suitable stopping for favorite dishes. They add crunch and eye appeal as well as flavor.

Several kinds of cooked fish or seafood may be substituted for the shrimp.

Most recipes, like this one, are being developed using metric measures. Using them is easy, so read on.

SHRIMP IMPERIAL

250 ml tomato juice
250 ml mayonnaise
500 g cleaned, cooked shrimp
500 ml cooked rice
75 ml finely chopped green pepper
1 ml salt
pinch of pepper
30 ml butter
750 ml corn flakes, crushed
50 ml slivered almonds

Divide mixture into 6 individual baking dishes.

In a small skillet, melt butter. Add Corn Flake crumbs and almonds and mix to moisten.

Sprinkle crumbs on each serving.

Creamed Cabbage

1 three-pound cabbage
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup finely chopped onion
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
¼ teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
1½ to 2 cups heavy cream

1. Pull off and discard the tough outer leaves of the cabbage. Discard any outside blemished leaves. Cut away and discard the core of the cabbage.

2. Cut the cabbage into quarters. Cut each quarter into one-inch-thick slices. Cut each slice into slices three inches wide. Separate the cabbage pieces.

3. Bring a large quantity of water to the boil and add the cabbage. Cook about two minutes. Drain.

4. Melt the butter in a large heavy skillet. Add the onion. Cook until wilted and add the cabbage, salt and pepper. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Partly cover and cook about 10 minutes or until most the the liquid has evaporated.

5. Add the cream, salt and pepper and cover. Cook about five minutes. Uncover and cook about 10 to 15 minutes or until the sauce has thickened somewhat and the cabbage is tender.

Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

WHOLE WHEAT POPOVERS

Extra popovers may be frozen. Reheat frozen popovers by placing, uncovered, on baking sheet in 350 deg. F. oven for approximately 15 minutes.

3 eggs
1 cup milk
3 tbsp. oil
½ cup whole-wheat flour
½ cup all-purpose flour
½ tsp. salt

Preheat oven to 375 deg. F.

Beat eggs until frothy, then beat in milk and oil. Add flours and salt, beating until smooth.

Pour batter into 12 well-greased muffin cups, filling each ¾ full. Bake for approximately 35 minutes, or until puffed and brown. Serve at once with butter and jam or honey.

Makes 12 popovers.

60-MINUTE GOURMET

Tripe Only in Name

By PIERRE FRANEY

It has been noted before that when it comes to the nomenclature of certain dishes in French cookery, things are, to borrow a line from Gilbert and Sullivan, seldom what they seem. An omelette norvegienne, or Norwegian omelet, is not an omelet but a baked Alaska; a langue de chat, or cat's tongue, is a sweet pasty, and so are tuiles, or tiles.

One of the best and most quickly made lunch or supper dishes is known a oeufs a la tripe, or tripe eggs, which is a bit of a joke: The dish has nothing to do with tripe but, rather, with the appearance of the dish. To prepare it, hard-cooked eggs are sliced and blended in a cream sauce. One of the flavorings that gives the dish much of its character is a fairly substantial amount of thinly sliced onions.

When served, the dish bears a reasonable resemblance to creamed tripe, and it is one of the most delectable ways of serving eggs. (It is also an ideal solution for what to do with several precooked eggs that might be left over from another recipe.)

Incidentally, a word about hard-cooked eggs may be in order. The word "boil" is misused when applied to cooking eggs. The eggs should not be boiled; they should be simmered. And they should be at room temperature when you begin. I prefer to hard-cook eggs this way: Place the eggs in a saucepan and add cold water to cover. Bring to a boil, and reduce the heat so that the water simmers.

Cook the eggs for 12 minutes if they are medium sized, for 15 minutes if they are large. (If a recipe calls for soft-cooked eggs, however, you should cook them only for three to six minutes, depending on your taste.) Remove the hard-cooked eggs from the heat and plunge then into cold water to make them easier to peel.

As the principal dish for a light lunch, these creamed eggs and onions would be complemented happily with a simple salad. But if you wanted to serve a vegetable that is a bit more substantial, a saute of zucchini bordelaise would be admirable.

For what it is worth, the dish is called bordelaise because it is flavored with chopped shallots and parsley. Chopped shallots are the characteristic ingredient of most French food preparations that bear the name.

There are those who claim that wines do not marry well with egg dishes, but I am inclined to disagree. A not-too-dry Alsatian white wine or a chilled Rhine wine would be suitable to serve with les oeufs a la tripe.

Les Oeufs a la Tripe
(Eggs with onions)

8 eggs
3 tablespoons butter
1½ cups thinly sliced onions
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 whole clove
3 tablespoons flour
1¾ cups milk
½ cup heavy cream
Pinch of cayenne pepper.

1. Cook the eggs in boiling water until firm. (See comments above.)

2. Meanwhile, heat one tablespoon of butter in a skillet and add the onions, salt, pepper and clove. Cover closely and cook over gentle heat without browning.

3. Melt remaining two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan and add the flour, stirring with a wire whisk. When blended, add the milk, stirring rapidly with the whisk. Cook, stirring, until thickened and smooth. Let simmer.

4. When the onions have cooked about five minutes, toss and stir them. Add the cream and simmer three minutes.

5. Add the onions in cream to the sauce, stirring to blend. Simmer together about five minutes. Remove and discard the clove. Add a pinch of cayenne pepper.

6. Peel and slice the eggs. Put them in a casserole and spoon and scrape the sauce over all. Stir as gently as possible to blend the eggs with the sauce.

Yield: 4 servings.

ZUCCCHINI BORDELAISE

4 small zucchini, about three-quarters pound
2 tablespoons butter
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley.

1. Wash the zucchini and pat dry.

2. Trim off the ends of the zucchini. Slice thinly. There should be about four cups.

3. Heat the butter in a skillet and add the zucchini. Toss and stir occasionally. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and the shallots. Cook about five minutes. Sprinkle with parsley and serve.

Yield: 4 servings.

Wax protects laminated plastic counter tops from scratching. A self-cleaning wax is best, because there's little wax buildup. If the plastic is old and/or scratched, try a paste wax to fill in scratches and then buff an even shine. Never leave protective rubber mats on a counter top. Water trapped under the mat has chemicals which react to rubber and plastic, and you end up with a mat-sized stain.

Some of this fall's most popular prints for women's scarves have been used for men's ties for years. Lucky you if you find an old wide tie to open, cut down and hand-hem into an inexpensive neck scarf . . . or even as a sash accent on a dress. And look in the men's department on sale day. Paisley prints may cost less there than the ones in women's accessories.

Icy Swimmers Land in Hospital

HAMILTON (CP) — A Hamilton man was reported in good condition in hospital Tuesday after he suffered injuries and another man suffered shock because of a rivalry in the annual New Year's plunge into the wintry waters of Lake Ontario.

Don Jones and Freddy Sless were two of 22 to participate in the annual Polar Bear dip.

Jones remained in the four-degree Celsius waters of the lake long after the others had fled, determined to beat rival Sless's 1976 endurance record of 15 minutes, seven seconds.

Encouraged by the approving roar of 200 spectators huddled in winter coats, Jones withstood the cold for a record 17 minutes, 28 seconds.

Meanwhile, Jones was out of the water and heading home in his car when it went off the road and slammed into a telephone pole.

He was rescued from the car and taken to Hamilton General Hospital where he was reported in good condition Tuesday with multiple injuries.

A policeman said it was possible that the shock of the lake swim and the return to the air could have caused Jones to lose control of his vehicle.

Sless regained the record by staying in the lake for 20 minutes, two seconds.

However, Sless ended up in the same hospital where he went immediately after the swim to be treated for shock. He was released.

"I don't care if I have to go to the hospital, as long as I can keep the record," Sless said later.

"As long as I know I did it, it feels good inside. Nobody will beat me, nobody."

Inuit Hunt for Friend's Body

HOLMAN ISLAND, N.W.T. (UPC) — Residents of this small Eskimo village know that Fred Van Duffelen couldn't survive two weeks lost in the sub-zero cold of the harsh Arctic, but they feel they owe their friend a decent burial.

Van Duffelen, 27, who helped market Eskimo works as manager of the local native arts and crafts cooperative, disappeared Dec. 17 on a caribou hunt. His broken-down snowmobile and supplies were found abandoned last week.

Temperatures hover around a flesh-freezing —30 degrees Celsius and daylight in the long northern winter has dropped to barely two hours a day. Snow has drifted to more than 20 feet deep in some areas.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police called off the official search Dec. 31 and RCMP Inspector Don Webster said police will take up the search for his body only after the snow melts in the spring.

Residents of this Eskimo village of 400 set out every day, however, on the 50 kilometre trip to the site northeast of here where they found Van Duffelen's snowmobile, sleeping bag and food supplies a week ago.

"There's no chance of finding him alive," the local pastor, Father Henri Tardy, said Tuesday.

"Villagers like him very much. He's a good man. They want to find the body. He fit in very well in the village where we are just like a big family."

Insp. Webster said because of the deep snow the villagers have to poke around with sticks or their harpoons.

While police have given up any hope of finding Van Duffelin's body, villagers are grateful for their earlier help. "The police did extraordinary work," said Father Tardy. "They did as much as they could do and they got very involved."

The RCMP admire the determination of the villagers, too. Holman Island is peopled almost entirely by Inuit who make their living trapping and hunting. Van Duffelen's shop employed several natives who produced stone prints and paintings for sale in the south.

"I have nothing but praise for the people of Holman Island for their courage and their selflessness," Webster said when police called off the official search.

"They have thrown every resource into the search. They have donated their time, their supplies, machinery and parts to find this man. Their dedication has been incredible — they seem determined not to give up."

Touchy Issue Returns

OTTAWA (CP) — The touchy issue of bilingual air traffic control in Quebec air space—called by Prime Minister Trudeau the greatest menace to national unity since conscription during the Second World War—will be the subject of more public hearings in Montreal next month.

At the heart of the matter is whether air traffic control services should be available in French at Mirabel and Dorval international airports.

There were work disruptions by English-language controllers in 1976 over expansion of French-language services at the Montreal-area airports and Ottawa appointed a three-member commission to make recommendations on whether dual-language services could be safely introduced.

Lanctot Back Friday?

MONTREAL (CP) —Jacques Lanctot, wanted for the 1970 kidnapping of British trade commissioner James Cross, is expected to end eight years of exile and return to Quebec on Friday, his lawyer says.

Robert Lemieux said Tuesday that Lanctot has booked seats for himself, his three young children and his wife, Suzanne, aboard an Air France flight from Paris.

But he noted that there might be a last-minute delay because Quebec provincial police have not yet completed arrangements to send two officers, who are expected to accompany Lanctot, to France.

Montreal police are prepared to arrest Lanctot on warrants outstanding since 1970 as soon as he sets foot on Canadian territory. But they were still awaiting confirmation of the date from the provincial police, who are responsible for the escort operation, a city police spokesman said.

He said an arrival was possible "in a week or a week and a half." Provincial police said the date was not yet firm.

In Ottawa, an external affairs department spokesman said Lanctot and his family have not yet applied to the Canadian embassy in Paris for special travel papers allowing them to leave France without administrative snarls.

The papers are necessary because the Lanctots' passports have expired.

BILL 101 TIME IN QUEBEC

MONTREAL (CP) — Today is the deadline for most firms in Quebec to prove they have begun making their French-speaking employees comfortable in their own language on the job.

By midnight tonight, most firms with 50 employees or more must have a temporary certificate from the Office de la Langue Francaise, the body set up to administer Quebec's French-language charter, known as Bill 101.

Companies must get a permanent "francization certificate" by Dec. 31, 1983.

The main exceptions to the rule are certain head-office operations which may negotiate individual deals with the government if the company involved gets more than half its revenues from outside the province.

Getting the temporary certificate means the firm has set up a committee of managers and employees to analyse the company's language situation and to draw up a program making French the operating language on everything from office memos to pay cheques and instruction manuals.

Once the Office has approved the program, the certificate is issued.

Raymond Gosselin, president of the Office, said recently that 96 per cent of the firms affected had received their certificates and that he expected no problems with English-speaking firms by the deadline.

Gosselin's main problem has so far come from a French-speaking newspaper and a French-speaking bank who refuse to go through the procedure because they are demonstrably French. Since Tuesday was a provincial-government holiday, it was not possible to confirm whether the situation has changed in recent days.

Gay Magazine 'Sickens' Him

TORONTO (CP) — W. Kenneth Campbell, founder of Renaissance International, said in provincial court Tuesday that he was sickened by an article published in Body Politic, a magazine directed at homosexuals.

Campbell, who described Renaissance International as a non-sectarian citizens' committee concerned with parents' responsibilty for the education of children, was testifying as a Crown witness in the trial of three officers of Pink Triangle Press, publisher of the magazine.

Company president Ken Popert, 31, treasurer Gerald Hannon, 31, and secretary Edward Jackson, 33, pleaded not guilty Tuesday to charges of using the mails to distribute indecent, immoral or scurrilous material and of possessing such material for the purpose of distribution.

Commenting on two articles in the December, 1977-January, 1978 issue of Body Politic, Campbell said many parents he knows "have a visceral reaction to this that is extremely negative."

The articles—Men Loving Boys Loving Men, under Hannon's byline, and The Year Children, an editorial commentary on the other article—describe sexual relations between three male adults and young boys between the ages of seven and 11.

The charges were laid a year ago after police raided the offices of Body Politic in December, 1977.

"The article does recommend or present as socially acceptable what is in effect psychological coercion of young boys as young as seven to the pleasures of homosexuality," said Campbell. "That is what the general public finds offensive about this article."

He said the article "advocates the exploitation of the immature by the adult in sexual matters."

Dr. James Long, a clinical psychologist and consultant at several Toronto hospitals, testified that the behavior described in the articles is inappropriate and unhealthy by social standards.

He said children tend to go along with suggestions made by adults in responsible positions and do things they would not do if the suggestions came from their peers.

Asked whether this amounts to a form of coercion, Dr. Long said, "The question is whether there is freedom of choice on the part of the child. . . ."

Shah's Kin in L.A. in Siege

Times News Services

Hundreds of chanting, rock-throwing demonstrators besieged a Beverly Hills mansion occupied by the mother and sister of the shah of Iran Tuesday, destroying two cars and setting at least a dozen fires.

Several hundred demonstrators regrouped on the outskirts of Los Angeles today, vowing to return and make the shah's family "pay in blood."

Police said the shah's mother, who arrived from riot-torn Iran last Friday, was later moved to a safer, undisclosed location.

Mina Azad, a spokesman for the protesters, said there would be more demonstrations.

"We're going to demonstrate as long as they (the shah's family) are here. We're not going to let them steal from the Iranian people and then come here and live in peace," she said.

Hundreds of the Iranians — who said they came from throughout the United States and foreign countries to attend a meeting of the Confederation of Iranian students — were camped at Devonshire Downs, a former fairgrounds in Northridge on the northern edge of Los Angeles today.

Leaders of the group said they intended to stay at least four more days and would mount more demonstrations, without saying when or where.

Most of the demonstrators, particularly those who crashed the gates and fought police, were not youths, but appeared to be men in the 25-to-35 age group.

At least 35 demonstrators were injured, two seriously, in the bloody confrontation as chanting Iranians and their supporters repeatedly tried to storm the home and were driven back by police using clubs, high-pressure fire hoses and tear gas.

Several policemen were also injured, none seriously.

Several demonstrators came close to entering the expensive home before about 300 protesters were forced from the steep slopes around the residence, herded down the hilly streets and corralled in a park.

The demonstrators were then released in groups of four or five without incident.

At one point, dozens of screaming demonstrators surged past a large gate and battled with helmeted officers in the driveway of the home before retreating amid clouds of tear gas, leaving behind a burning police car.

The protesters started at least a dozen other fires on the hillsides around the mansion, throwing placards and dry brush onto the flames while chanting: "Death to the shah."

The violence followed a peaceful march by about 2,000 persons through this community about 15 kilometres west of Los Angeles.

AVALANCHE KILLS FOUR SKIERS

ANDERMATT, Switzerland (Reuter) — A young British Army officer struggled down a dark mountainside in freezing temperatures to summon help after four of his five skiing companions were killed in a massive avalanche.

Mike McKechnie, believed to be in his 20s, then led rescuers back to the scene of the accident on the Piz Pazzola in southern Switzerland.

Britons Michael De Pret Roose, his wife Karin, their 19-year-old son Nicholas, and Swiss guide Ernst Renner all were found dead.

The fifth member of the party, Londoner Mark McKenchie, was pulled out alive after 20 hours buried under the snow. He was flown to hospital suffering from frostbite and pneumonia, but doctors Tuesday night described his condition as satisfactory.

It was not immediately clear if or how the two McKechnies were related.

Local residents said they were amazed the two men survived the avalanche, which crashed 650 metres down the mountainside over an area more than a kilometre wide.

Rescuers, alerted when the party failed to return, were hampered in their search by a blinding snowstorm.

Mike McKechnie managed to free himself and spent Monday night climbing down the mountain to the valley below in temperatures that sank to -25 degrees.

Police said he raised the alarm in Tschamut, the highest village in the region, and agreed to lead rescuers back to the spot.

Fresh Nicaragua Violence Kills 27

MANAGUA (UPI) — The worst violence since last September's civil war has killed at least 27 guerrillas, soldiers and civilians in two days of countrywide fighting, military sources said today.

The deaths raised to at least 206 the number of killings since the war, which left at least 1,500 dead.

The mounting violence apparently was meant to call attention to the Jan. 10 first anniversary of the murder of President Anastasio Somoza's political opponent, newspaper publisher Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, security sources said.

The fighting, which started New Year's Day, erupted in cities and mountains from the northern Honduran border to the tense southern border with Costa Rica, the military sources said.

They said the bloodiest strife occurred in a mountain range known as El Tular along the Honduran border, 180 miles north of Managua, where at least 15 Sandinista guerrillas and two government soldiers were killed in ground fighting and air strikes in the last 18 hours.

At least seven other National Guard troopers were wounded in the area, the sources added.

In mountain fighting late Tuesday, the sources said government troops battled 60 guerrillas who crossed over from Honduras.

In Managua, at least six guerrillas, including two teen-age women, were killed in a clash with troops along the highway to the capital's Las Mercedes airport Monday night, police sources said. The guerrillas opened fire with machine guns but were beat back by superior firepower, the sources said.

They said a government soldier also was killed in the action, the first major fighting in the capital in weeks.

Opposition leaders announced plans for a mammoth demonstration in Managua Jan. 10, the anniversary of Chamoro's assassination. One dissident leader said at least 100,000 people were expected to take part in a march to the cemetery where Chamorro is buried.

Chamorro, the publisher of Nicaragua's fiery opposition newspaper La Prensa, was gunned down in broad daylight and his supporters believe it was the work of pro-government henchmen.

Blast Puts Orbit In Doubt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Space agency officials say they don't yet know if an explosion in a test version of a space shuttle will delay the ship's maiden orbital flight in September.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) reported Tuesday a pump in the engine of the space shuttle's test version exploded during a ground firing last week, endangering the scheduled Sept. 28 takeoff of astronauts John Young and Robert Crippen from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

"An assessment of the impact to the engine test program and the first flight schedule is being made," the NASA announcement said.

It said all space shuttle engine testing at the test centre near Bay St. Louis, Miss., will be delayed until the cause of the failure is determined and modifications made to other engines.

Development of the shuttle's powerful hydrogen-oxygen engines has been one of the critical items pacing the rocket plane's launch schedule. The flight originally was scheduled for March.

When the Sept. 28 date was announced last September, associate NASA administrator John Yardley said further delays could occur "if unforeseen problems arise or the tests are not entirely successful."

NASA said the test engine was heavily damaged and it would take three or four weeks to repair damage to the ground test stand.

The engine was undergoing its final test before being installed with two others for a series of test firings utilizing a complete engine section similar to that which will be used in the space shuttle.

The shuttle will use the advanced engines to help propel it from the Cape Canaveral, Fla., launch pad to orbit eight minutes later. Two solid propellant rocket motors will also be used for the first stages of the flight.

NASA said the failure occurred in a high pressure turbopump that feeds oxygen to the combustion chamber. A fire developed in the hot-gas turbine that drives the pump, apparently because of a valve failure.

The shuttle flight is one of 16 launchings on NASA's 1979 schedule.

Also this year, three spacecraft are scheduled to rendezvous with the planets Jupiter and Saturn.

NOSE THUMBED AT AUTHORITY

PARIS (Reuter) — French fugitive Jacques Mesrine, who is wanted in Canada on murder charges, thumbs his nose at authority in an interview with the left-wing newspaper Liberation.

Mesrine, who made a spectacular jailbreak from La Sante prison in Paris last May 8, repeated his demands for an end to the country's top security prisons.

Mesrine's escape from La Sante was his third getaway from justice since 1972.

In the interview, prepared for publication today, Mesrine said he had gone to the home of Paris magistrate Charles Petit last November with the intention of killing the judge.

"For personal reasons, I went to Petit's house to execute him but that was not my main motive," Mesrine said.

"I wanted to needle people into thinking about the top security wings . . . which are a form of legalized murder."

He said he is living happily with his girl-friend, nicknamed the Italian, and is not at all worried about being found by police.

Probe Opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. justice department officials are privately expressing anger over a congressional request to reopen investigations into the assassinations of John Kennedy and Martin Luther King.

While the department officially said Tuesday it would wait to review the House assassinations committee's report before deciding its next move, some officials who asked not to be quoted by name said they see little value in attempting to pursue cases that are respectively 15 and 10 years old.

"They're asking us to finish what they started," said one official.

Another said: "They had $5 million and they came up with loose strings that they want us to tie together."

The assassinations committee issued a summary of its findings last weekend, concluding that conspiracies were likely in both slayings and recommending that the justice department review evidence in both cases.

Rich, Tough Year For Forest Industry

VANCOUVER (UPC) — British Columbia's giant forest industry expects 1979 to be another banner year and industry sources said this could result in tough negotiating sessions with the three major unions.

Prices are rising or holding firm in most areas, and the industry expects 1979 could be a record year, MacMillan-Bloedel spokesman Tom Williams said.

But contracts run out this summer for 62,000 members of the three major forest product unions — International Woodworkers of America; Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada; and Canadian Paperworkers' Union

Record shipments of newsprint, lumber and plywood brought producers record profits in 1978, and industry officials expect union negotiators to seek contract increases reflecting these higher company earnings.

"We're hoping for a peaceful settlement," Williams said. "But we anticipate from things the IWA has said that negotiations will be tough."

The industry boom has been helped by the devaluation of the Canadian dollar, which makes Canadian prices more attractive to foreign firms dealing in American dollars.

Calvert Knudsen, president of industry giant MacMillan-Bloedel, said 1978 will "almost certainly prove to have been a record year." He forecast 1979 "will be even better."

But an industry strike such as the one that crippled the wood industry for several months in 1975 could endanger British Columbia's new markets and send buyers elsewhere, Williams said.

He said newspapers are now willing to pay almost any price for newsprint as publishers scramble to keep up their inventories. He said the "sellers' market" should hold through 1979.

Knudsen said a price hike for pulp was expected this year.

While domestic lumber markets won't change appreciably in 1979, and the U.S. housing industry was expected to contract, foreign markets should take up any slack, Williams said.

The Bridge Expert

It would be my guess that over 90 per cent of the slams bid in expert circles would be fulfilled if the declarer were permitted to see all four hands. However, the law states that declarer is allowed to look at only his hand and the dummy when he is playing out any given contract. Thus the ratio of slams made to slams bid is well below 90 per cent.

In today's deal, South would have had no difficulty in bringing home his slam contract if he had been allowed to look at the defenders' cards. But, at the table, he went down. His defeat was brought about by a few deceptive falsecards made by the East-West defenders. The deal arose in a top-echelon game.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

North's two-club bid was the initiation of the Stayman Convention. His five-heart bid asked South to bid the small slam if the latter had a good one-notrump opening bid. South, having a maximum hand, accepted the invitation.

After winning the opening lead with his spade ace, East shifted to a low diamond, South taking the trick with his ace. As is evident, the slam was there for the taking by cashing the ace and king of trumps, felling East's queen. But, at the table, South was given a push in the wrong direction.

At trick three, South cashed the ace of trumps. West followed suit with the seven, as East dropped the ten. Declarer knew that one of the defenders was not telling the truth, since the three of trumps was concealed by one of them. When South next made another trump lead, West played the eight-spot. Declarer now paused for reflection.

South recognized that East might well have been dealt the doubleton Q-10. But he also appreciated that East might have started with the doubleton 10-3 and was trying to talk declarer out of finessing against West's (hypothetical) Q-8-7. Finally declarer finessed the board's jack — and incurred a one-trick set.

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, January 4
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Be a self-starter — cycle high and many persons will be intrigued with what you say and do. You also can make some accurate predictions. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure in scenario. Exchange ideas. Yes, your questions will be answered.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): You get glimpse behind the scenes. You gain support from one who is "financially responsible." You can add to beauty of surroundings — you can also make residence a more pleasant, harmonious place. Libra figures prominently.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): You climb over obstacles. You surprise many by your determination, ability to organize — and by your inner strength. If single, this could be a day that begins chain of circumstances leading to marriage. Married or single, this is a power time — and you emerge victorious.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Get going beyond current limitations. Many want to hear you, to know more about you. Obtain pulse of public. Spread influence. Improve distribution and display. Aries, Libra figure prominently — and so does the number 9.

Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. You could meet someone who introduces you to hobby which brings out your most creative qualities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Avoid direct confrontations — be diplomatic, listen to tale of woe from associate, but don't get inextricably involved. Gemini, Aries figue prominently. Keep resolutions concerning work, health, recreation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Highlight creativity, change, speculative ventues. Element of timing is with you. Romance, variety and excitement are part of scenario. Young persons pays you meaningful compliment. This is time of solid achievement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Changes occur within family situation. Open a line for discussion, dialogue. Restless individual needs outlet for expression. Be a good listener. You'll learn — and you could reinforce love. Gemini, Virgo persons figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Avoid being trapped by a series of apparently unrelated questions. Wild goose chase may be part of scenario. Be versatile without scattering your forces. Money, investment, missing object are spotlighted. You win by seeking close to home base. Yes, you'll understand!

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Obtain hint from Aquarius message. What was stolen will be recovered. Accent on valuables, income, personal possessions. Stay away from one who schemes, makes promises and promotes deception. Bell of response should be ringing!

IF JANUARY 4 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are self-reliant, more sensitive than many might imagine, lonely in a crowd, perhaps a stranger within your own family. Aquarius, Scorpio persons play key roles in your life. April will be your most important month of 1979. Swift changes occur in January — member of opposite sex plays outstanding role. This month you gain through written word. Call or message on 9th, 18th or 27th can lead to creative, exciting adventure which results in profit. You are frank, basically honest. You attract persons who are willing to receive but do not always feel an obligation to give in return.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J.A.H. HUNTER

"I've just realized my age and the age of my bike are opposites, same digits in reverse order," said Mary. "And you'd hardly call me young."

"That's a matter of how you feel, and you certainly don't act old," Tony replied. "I still see you riding into the village."

Mary chuckled. "Well, I'll let you into a secret. One year ago the bike was just a quarter as old as I was."

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

HOW TO WRITE

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Yule Plants: Are They Still Lovely?

Lovely plants were seen blooming in pots before Christmas ready for purchase as gifts. How many are looking as fresh now, scarcely 10 days later?

Giving a living plant ranks in my mind with the giving of a live animal intended as a pet. Admittedly, there is a difference in degree of responsibility, for the plant's care is far less time-consuming that that demanded by a pet animal.

The main point is to find a suitable place to keep the plant while it is flowering. It may be depended on to remain there without constant attention, and it will never demand to be put outside, at least until nights are warm in June.

Most showy of the Christmas plants in pots are those we call Poinsettias, though in some eastern cities they are known as Christmas Star. To be sure we all know what we are talking about, these two names both refer to Euphorbia pulcherrima, which means "beautiful." And beautiful they are with their broad red bracts surrounding the cluster of greenish-yellow flowers. Take time to look at the flowers before they fade, using a magnifying glass.

There are a few with creamy white bracts around and perhaps a few pink ones, although I haven't seen the pink this year. All need the same general care.

We have had a lovely specimen in our home for two weeks now without any change in its appearance — six bright red clusters of bracts poised above wide-spreading, dark green leaves.

Since it arrived, this Poinsettia has been given water four times; the first drink on arrival because the pot felt so light in weight. What remained in the catch saucer after an hour was emptied, for the plant does not like to be constantly wet. The ideal place for the Poinsettia in our house is on the tiled earth of the fireplace which is not used just now. This is slightly cooler than on a table.

Another popular Christmas flowering plant is the cactus which blooms at this season. It is also a short-day plant, like the Poinsettia needing about eight weeks of eight-hour days to bring along the buds which first become visible after a brief dry period from Sept. 15 to Oct. 15.

After flowering begins, give the Christmas cactus good daylight but not strong sunshine as it grows in jungle trees in dappled sunlight. It likes a night temperature around 15- to 18-deg. C and only enough water to prevent shrinking of the so-called leaves. These are really the stems of the flowers as can be realized if you study the plant.

Cyclamens are another showy florists' plant grown in pots for winter gifts. They will, with minimum care in a north-facing window, last in bloom until Easter. Allow soil to become partially dried (test by comparative weight of pot before and after watering) before pouring tepid water into space at edge of pot to almost fill. Never pour water over the centre of the plant where the fleshy tuberous root-stock can be seen at the surface. This tuber retains moisture as do the leaves and the stems, all reasons against overwatering.

Allow the water to soak through for an hour, empty catch saucer and don't water again until soil is becoming dried. Wilting leaves and flower stems are a sign of either underwatering or overwatering. Test by comparative weight.

Christmas Cherry, Solanum pseudocapsicum, is a relative of garden potatoes and tomatoes, yet its round, shiny, orange-to-red fruits are poisonous. Other names for the plant include "a little orange-tree" which is badly misleading; in eastern Canada this Solanum is called Cleveland Cherry, while elsewhere it is known as Jerusalem Cherry. Don't overwater this plant or the fruits and le

Air Canada Profit Takes Off

MONTREAL (UPC) —Air Canada expects 1978 profits to top the record $20 million earned in 1977, but it fears the Canadian Transport Commission's deferment of Jan. 1 fare increases will cut deeply into revenues this year.

The 1978 profit could have topped $50 million, the nation's flag carrier said in a prepared statement Tuesday, but fourth quarter losses from a seasonal drop in the number of passengers resulted in lower earnings.

Air Canada said it also lost $48 million in pre-tax earnings because of last summer's 10-day shutdown in a contract dispute with machinists and ground service personnel.

"The higher earnings that were registered in 1978 are the result of sale of technology, computer service and maintenance," as well as improved earnings from investment in short term loans, airline president Claude Taylor said.

Despite the likelihood of a record profit, Taylor said he was disappointed with some aspects of the airline's 1978 operations.

"Our yield per revenue passenger mile will be only one percent higher than last year. The profit was made with no reduction in service standards," Taylor said.

He said that level of profit was inadequate to finance Air Canada's future plans and the Canadian Transport Commission decision to suspend a Jan. 1 fare increase has made it even more difficult to generate the needed revenues.

The CTC last month deferred to April 1 an average 5 percent fare hike requested for Jan. 1 by Air Canada and six other airlines. The CTC said the airlines had not fully considered the benefits resulting from a deferred increase in fuel prices and tax concessions contained in the November federal budget.

"The operating profit earned for 1978 is the result of intensive use of equipment and the marketing of surplus seats at bargain prices for those who can plan their air travel in advance," Taylor said.

"That can only work up to a point, after which Air Canada begins to lose revenue from full-fare passengers, who either go for the lower price, or who cannot get a seat."

Air Canada's total passenger traffic increased by 6 percent in 1978, but the domestic growth was largely limited to low-fare services.

King Saw Visions In Lather

OTTAWA (CP) — In his final year as prime minister of Canada, William Lyon Mackenzie King saw images in his morning shaving lather of his late mother, his deceased pet dogs and symbols of the Cold War between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Details of his shaving lather visions are contained in the Liberal leader's 1948 personal diaries opened at the government archives Tuesday under a 30-year-release rule. Only scholars had access to them before.

In the diaries, typewritten in black binders, King also describes messages he received from prominent dead persons, such as former United States president F. D. Roosevelt, through "automatic handwriting" by spiritualists in a trance.

And he recounts dreams, including one in which he is unemployed and destitute, unsuccessfully seeking a job in a building that was half a bank and half a restaurant.

That dream left him depressed and wondering if his decision to retire at age 71 after 29 years as party leader—21 of them as prime minister—was the right choice.

"When it was over, I imagined to myself how I would feel after I had given up all sources of income. . . . Began to think that I perhaps had made a miscalculation as to what was the wise and right thing to do," he wrote in February.

King's first shaving vision occurred New Year's Eve, when "during shaving, I looked at the lather and saw an extraordinary likeness to two dogs—quite perfect."

And he thought there was another dog in the distance, apparently referring to Pat I, and Pat II, former pet Scotch Terriers he loved deeply and to a third dog later received as a gift.

Then on New Year's Day, 1948, the lather contained a shape "which was the most perfect head of my mother . . . again with two dogs. . . . It was a particularly beautiful little image."

Later in January, he saw an image of an eagle, a polar bear and a dog in the lather that "might have been prophetic of what was happening in the struggle between Russia and the United States."

He described mundane dreams—one about having a bloody nose—that seemed insignificant. But others illustrated fear of loneliness after retirement and some were like premonitions of real events.

Jan. 30, he dreamed that the "the furies" were chasing him and that if they "caught up with me, I would be assassinated."

When King woke, the first radio newscast he heard announced the assassination of Indian leader Mahatma Gandhi.

On another occasion he dreamed of a place where an explosion was about to occur. The morning newscast contained a report about a gas explosion in Alberta.

Some dreams, such as one about "being in the open void, only at sea and seemingly alone" forced him to reflect on the post-politicial days that were near.

DOLLAR SLUMPING TO 83-CENT MARK

OTTAWA (CP) — As the Canadian dollar hovered today on international money markets at around 83.96 cents U.S.—its lowest since October—the government reported spending $259.5 million of its reserves support the currency during December.

Most of the amount used to buy unwanted dollars was drawn from a stand-by credit the government set up last year with U.S.and other foreign banks. During the month, the government drew $300 million out of this account, bringing its year-end borrowing on this credit to $1.3 billion.

The government has a similar credit with Canada's chartered banks, but no drawings were made in December, leaving year-end drawings on this account at $1.4 billion.

The over-all change in official reserves for the month was an increase of $81.8 million, reflecting both the government's borrowing to support the dollar and an appreciation in holdings because the U.S. dollar strenghtened on world markets.

The improvement in the U.S. dollar during December increased the value of Canada's reserves by $18.6 million. This was a turnaround from the previous month, when $123.9 million was lost because of depreciation of the U.S. dollar.

During the month, the dollar dropped against its U.S. counterpart to 84.06 cents from 85.59 cents.

Meanwhile, the U.S. dollar opened higher in most of Europe's money markets today and the price of gold was down sharply.

On the London bullion exchange the price of gold slipped more than $4 to 221.250 per ounce after finishing Tuesday at $225.375. In Zurich gold fell to $221.375 per ounce compared with its Friday closing price of $224.625.

Tell All Rules For Used Cars

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

If that little old lady who last drove the vehicle was a racing driver, that fact has to be disclosed by the used car salesman under provincial legislation that took effect Jan. 1.

Under the new regulations, salesman must post the asking price, state the correct mileage, admit any previous damage and quote the full purchase price, including interest.

"These regulations will give greater protection to the buyer," Consumer and Corporate Affairs information officer Rick Stevens said today.

"We will have three full-time inspectors in the field to see the new regulations are being followed. In addition, there are six other inspectors in the ministry who can help to supervise these regulations."

Used car dealers will face higher provincial licences to help pay the costs of supervising the new rules. Annual fee in 1978 was $24. This rises to $81 this year and to $168 in 1980.

Sticker prices are required for every vehicle on the lot where any written representation is made.

If there is a sign indicating anything about the car, its make or year, the wording must include the asking price.

But if there is no poster or sign, a company does not have to display the asking price.

"The salesman must tell the prospective buyer if the vehicle has been used as a racing car, police car, emergency vehicle, taxi or as a rental car."

And if a car has been driven outside B.C., this too must be disclosed. This is to advise the customer the car may have been subjected to salt spray as a result of being driven in areas of heavy snowfall where salt is deposited on the roads.

Any car judged unfit for transportation must be labelled "unsafe" and can be sold for parts only.

There is also a provision for indicating all costs, including licence and interest to be paid by the consumer. These costs must be indicated in the sales agreement.

Stevens said few inspectors are required to police the regulations because customers and rival firms will provide leads.

"With legislation of this type we always get tips from a company that a competitor down the street is not complying with the regulations.

Skate Warning Not Heeded

A slight warming trend in the weather has prompted Greater Victoria police to step up warnings about skating on area lakes.

Police in Saanich and Colwood are going to schools and increasing patrols of the numerous lakes in their areas to spread the message that ice is melting so quickly skating is becoming unsafe.

But not everyone listens.

Said a Saanich police spokesman: "Some are listening to us; some are ignoring us. It's frustrating because there is nothing much we can do if a person refuses to heed our advice."

Colwood is experiencing the same reaction.

"We're getting some resistance. There are lots of people who don't agree," a spokesman said.

The danger is that in large lakes underwater currents and springs make ice formations uneven.

Last Friday a 15-year-old girl drowned when she fell through the ice while skating on Quamichan Lake near Duncan and four other persons were rescued in three separate incidents over the holiday weekend.

Meanwhile the Victoria weather office is forecasting a continuation of temperatures around the freezing mark, with highs of two degrees and lows of between minus two and minus four.

A spokesman said a large system of high pressure is moving down from the Arctic and has covered most of the interior B.C.

The system is causing winds to blow from the east, thus preventing the normal flow of warm moist air off the Pacific hitting the province.

The cold snap has sent the thermometer plunging in interior cities. Prince George went to minus 42 on Dec. 31, breaking the previous record low for that day set in 1968 with minus 40.

The thermometer dropped in Victoria to a record low of -10 and in Vancouver on the same day, it went to -14 degrees.

SHOCK MOVE BY PROVINCE

Municipal Spending Frozen by Wolfe

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The provincial government in a surprise move today froze all municipal government mill rates.

The object of the move by the senior government is to hold 1979 property taxes to the same level as 1978, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said at a press conference.

Wolfe admitted the move was prompted largely because the government feels a number of municipalities have not been doing a good enough job in practising restraint.

And it limits municipal and regional government budget increases to a maximum of five per cent over last year.

"Any exception must be of an extraordinry nature and must be approved by the inspector of municipalities," Wolfe said.

And any municipalities carrying a surplus from the past two years must use it up in calculating their 1979 budget.

School districts are invoed in the government decree to a lesser extent.

The province will be requesting municipal councils meet with local school boards to work out a program to minimize school district taxes.

And the ministry of education will accelerate its program of evaluating budget performances, including incentive provisions for school districts showing good fiscal management.

Other measures include using the current pupil-teacher ratio as a floor, an indication that the government feels the present ratio is as low as it will ever get.

Wolfe also said the government will be looking at school district administrative salaries and those that are too high by provincial standards will be identified and brought into line.

The minister reaffirmed an earlier announcement from the health ministry that hospital district budget increases will be held to the five per cent maximum.

Wolfe said schooldistricts are not included in the specific freeze because the bulk of their budgets go to teachers' salaries which are decided by arbitration.

In the past, the government has appealed to municipalities to keep property taxes to a minimum, he said, but in many cases the appeals haven't worked so the government decided to impose the freeze itself.

He said that the Municipal Act may have to be amended to implement the order.

Asked if the government was interfering with the responsibilities of duly elected municipal level govern-

AT THE MERCY OF THE COURT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Phylis Gilmour, struggling with cancer and no money, has thrown herself on the court's mercy over a lawsuit brought against her by the Eaton's department store chain.

"Do as you will, I can't fight any more," Gilmour said in a hand-written statement, consisting mainly of receipts, filed with the B.C. Supreme Court.

Gilmour was sued in December by Eaton's, which claims she has not paid about $1,700 owing on her charge account.

"If you feel I'm not trying to pay this account, do as you see fit. Placing me in prison, at least my money worries would be over," said the Sardis woman.

Gilmour's statement listed why she does not have the money to pay the bill.

It said that between December, 1977, and March, 1978, four broken bones in her foot kept her from working and she had no medical coverage.

Gilmour's statement says her home was destroyed by fire in December. She now is suing her insurance company because it won't cover the loss.

Her doctor then told her she has cancer. Finally, a tree fell on the trailer she is living in and the insurance company won't pay, claiming it was an act of God.

Canadian Airlift From Iran Begins

Times News Services

About 90 evacuees, some carrying babies, struggled off a Hercules plane at Ankara today, the first of a group of 550 Canadians and other nationals to be airlifted from the violence of Iran by Canadian aircraft.

Some were haggard, recalling gunshots and rioting, while others were more cheerful, glad to be plucked from the Iranian crisis where the shah likely will leave on a vacation soon as another attempt is made to restore a stabilized civilian government.

Prime Minister-designate Shahpour Bakhtiar promised today in Tehran to gradually dismantle martial law throughout this strife-torn country and hinted that Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi will leave Iran for "rest and a vacation."

In a news conference shortly after both houses of the Iranian parliament formally nominated him as Iran's new civilian prime minister, Bakhtiar said the shah's planned trip is "the desire he has expressed himself."

There is speculation Washington urged him to do it.

Bakhtiar, whose proposed government now must be approved by the shah, outlined his plans for restoring the country to civilian rule after two months of a martial-law regime installed to quell anti-shah riots.

Among other things, he said Iran will continue to sell oil to countries that need it, but he left open the possibility that continued exports to Israel could be jeopardized because of its dispute with other Moslem states.

The vote in the Senate was unanimous, but a spokesman said several members of the Majlis, the lower house, spoke and voted against Bakhtiar. Informed sources said the dissident deputies were offended by his statement in a TV speech Monday that Iran had been suffering from corrupt government for 25 years.

Striking oil workers have agreed to produce enough oil for domestic consumption in Iran on orders from exiled Iranian religious leader Ayatollah Rumollah Khomeini, his spokesman said today in Paris.

The 90 Canadians, Britons and Americans who came off the first plane at Ankara had been employed by Canadian forestry companies in Iran.

Evacuees spoke of growing food and fuel shortages, rioting and increasing anti-American feeling that had spread to the point where in some cases resentment also was expressed against Canadians.

School Closures Get Second Look

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

The unopposed election Tuesday night of Carol Pickup as chairman of the Greater Victoria school board strengthens a shift away from a board dominated by budget balancers.

In her inaugural address, Pickup reaffirmed she intends to keep schools open and to improve relationships with staff and parent groups.

She said after the meeting it's likely a moratorium will be placed on closing district schools.

Pickup, who opposed the decision by last year's board to close Bank Street and Tolmie schools because of declining enrolment trends, said last night the board hasn't accumulated enough information to make closure decisions.

A space utilization study suggested by Pickup and trustee John Young but defeated by last year's board could be approved this year, she said.

The board experienced a change in the balance of power when voters defeated the re-election bids of trustees Peter Dorazio and Bud Smith, both committed to holding costs down.

They were replaced by Dr. Martin Levin and Winfield Mott, who ran on similar platforms citing the need for an increase in educational quality in the district.

Levin, a University of Victoria political science professor, was elected vice-chairman of the board, replacing Dorazio.

During her address, Pickup said 1979 is the International Year of the Child and called for "rational humanistic planning".

She said the board should have a complete understanding of educational needs of the district before contemplating school closures.

Establishing goals and objectives for meeting those needs should come first, she said.

Pickup called district employees "our most valuable resource" and said she wants to improve relationships with staff.

She also said the board must open lines of communication with the newly-formed Confederation of Victoria Parents Associations and other parent groups.

Pickup, who voted against a board decision last year to withdraw from the B.C. School Trustees Association because membership was too costly, said last night she wants to see the board back in the organization.

Another N.Z. UFO Filmed

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — Yet another unidentified flying object was filmed over New Zealand today by a television crew.

The object—described by the cameraman as like an illuminated ping-pong ball with a tinge of red in the centre—was filmed where a rash of UFO sightings have been made recently off the northeast coast of the South Island.

The object, said by the television crew to have appeared about 3,300 metres in the sky over the sea, was not seen by an air force plane which conducted a midnight-to-dawn patrol over the area to investigate the sightings.

The defence ministry said its aircraft had concluded that a combination of bright lights from a Japanese fishing fleet and the rising of the planet Venus was a possible explanation for the recent UFO reports.

Television officials said they were handing over the film to the department of scientific and industrial research for computer analysis.

Reporter Terry Olsen said the crew had seen two objects but had film of only one. He described it as being three times as bright as an average star.

Sound recorder Lloyd McFadden said it was rotating on its axis and pulsating, while cameraman Cas Kasukaitis said: "It was definitely moving, because we fixed the camera on it and the object moved out of frame."

Olsen said the second object appeared to flare up suddenly by the side of the first. "It then scudded across the sky."

Fishing Pair Overdue

Jim Steer, 30, and Janet Cooke, 29, left Tahsis Friday in a 26-foot Reinell power boat.

They were expected to return to Tahsis on Saturday.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt said the couple may have travelled as far as Ucluelet or Tofino.

30 Seamen Lost As Tanker Sinks

Times News Services

MIAMI, Fla. — An international rescue squad resumed searching today for 30 seamen who abandoned an oil tanker that caught fire in the stormy Caribbean and later sank. Four crew members survived and at least one other drowned.

The five crew members who have been accounted for stayed aboard the burning, 350-foot Master Michael for 24 hours after the fire broke out before plunging into the sea Tuesday morning to swim for a passing ship.

The four survivors, who are aboard the ship Ilici headed for Venezuela, told rescuers their shipmates were forced into the rough seas Monday morning as the fire raged out of control.

The Coast Guard said no oil spill had been sighted.

Meanwhile, salvage crews held the crippled Greek supertanker Andros Patria on a steady course off the northwest coast of Spain today as local fishermen pressed demands for a ban on oil tankers within the country's 200-mile limit.

Fishermen from La Coruna and nearby ports met Tuesday night and agreed to ask Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez to force tankers to respect Spain's territorial limits.

The Andros Patria, carrying crude oil from the Persian Gulf to Rotterdam, cracked open and caught fire on New Year's Eve, spilling thousands of tons of oil off the coast of northwestern Galicia.

Thirty of the 33 people on board were feared drowned after taking to lifeboats which capsized in mountainous seas.

Three crew members were rescued from the ship by helicopter and salvage workers later boarded the abandoned vessel and brought it under tow.

Galician fishermen, who only recently recovered from the pollution caused by the wreck of a tanker in 1976, said supertankers pose a grave threat to their livelihood.

The salvage workers who boarded the Andros Patria from a Dutch tug Wednesday said they were holding the tanker steady about 30 nautical miles off the coast.

Buckling Roof Propped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Work resumed today on the second phase of the provincial government's courthouse development as the possibility of a roof collapse eased.

The several hundred workers at the project were evacuated Tuesday morning when cracks were noticed in several of the six-inch steel tubes which support the development's $1 million glass roof.

Construction officials said that water which had accumulated in some of the pipes had frozen, cracking the pipes when it expanded.

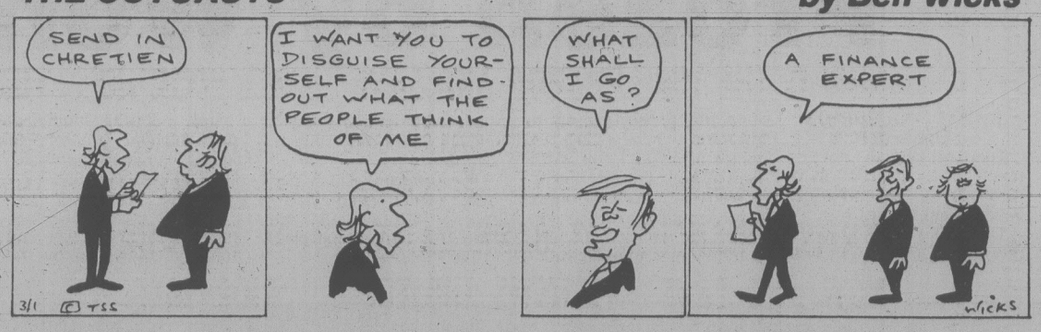

Scaffolding was erected to support the weakened areas.

When the cracks were discovered, police cordoned off the area, but traffic was flowing normally today.

Project chairman Gordon Shrum said Tuesday the situation is not a catastrophe, and the "only concern is that opening of the building may be delayed while the problem is rectified."

47 Die in Europe Storms

Times News Services

More snow is on the way to Europe, British forecasters predicted today as parts of the continent were still digging out from their worst weather of the century. Forty-seven deaths have been reported so far.

The forecast also included more of the strong northeasterly winds which helped produce the freeze-up from Britain all the way across Europe, now in its fifth day.

The sub-zero temperatures and snow were blamed for 19 deaths in Britain, 12 in West Germany, 10 in France, five in Hungary, and one in Sweden. They died shovelling snow, in road skids, falls, drownings, exhaustion in snow drifts or simply because they couldn't withstand the cold.

Meanwhile, a cold front that brought sub-zero temperatures, snow and death to the United States' mid-west moved east today, ending a rainy January thaw in the northeast and sending temperatures plummeting far below freezing all the way south to Alabama and Florida.

It was a widespread—and severe—cold snap. Citrus growers in Florida and Texas feared crop damage. Thousands of homeowners near Detroit shivered through up to three hours of chill when furnaces went out during power outages.

Snow was reported from Michigan through the Ohio Valley, in eastern Tennessee and the northern Rockies. In Wisconsin, at least three storm-related deaths were reported—a man and a woman dead of exposure and a man who apparently collapsed at the door of his home.

A heavy snow warning was issued for northwestern Pennsylvania, and winter storm warnings were posted in New York state and Vermont.

Hospital emergency rooms in Dallas were crowded with victims of cold weather and icy conditions Tuesday, with one hospital reporting 22 persons brought in with broken bones after slipping on ice.

In central Florida, angry spokesmen for Florida Citrus Mutual said there may have been tree damage because growers were caught with heaters off when the temperature dipped 10 degrees lower than forecast.

Aftershocks of an earthquake that rattled five California counties continued Tuesday as winds of 150 kilometres an hour and flooding closed an interstate highway and several bridges, stranding hundreds of motorists.

Palestinians Fire At Israeli Jets

BEIRUT (UPI) — Palestinian anti-aircraft gunners opened fire today on Israeli jets that flew over Palestinian camps near the southern port of Sidon, witnesses said.

None of the jets were hit, they said, but Palestinian guerrillas were on full alert.

The incident marked the third consecutive day that Israeli aircraft had penetrated Lebanese airspace and the fifth day of Israeli military activity in the tense southern border area.

Lebanese residents of the inland town of Nabatiyeh, 9 miles north of the Israeli border and a frequent target of Israeli shelling and air strikes, were reported to be emigrating to Sidon and the mountains to the north.

In Beirut President Elias Sarkis and the country's top security officers acknowledged that more time was needed for Lebanon's regular troops to fill the security vacuum in parts of Beirut and the suburbs.

A two-hour meeting heard situation reports from the command of the predominently Syrian Arab Deterrent Force, the Lebanese army and Internal Security forces.

While expressing satisfaction with efforts aimed at "a total elimination of all armed manifestations and appearances," the participants agreed the country's regular forces needed more time to be entrusted with their security duties.

The meeting was attended by the force's Lebanese commander Col. Sami el Khatib, Interior Minister Salah Salman, Prime Minister Selim el Hoss, Army commander and defense minister Gen. Victor Khoury and Internal Security chief Col. Ahmed al Hajj.

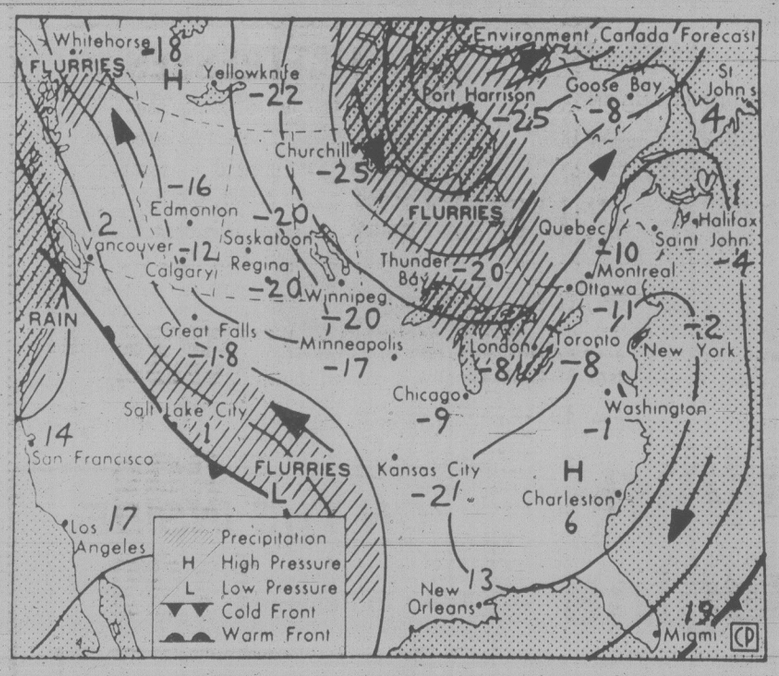

SEAT BELT SAVES LIFE

KELOWNA (CP) — Police say a seat belt may have saved the life of a 70-year-old man when his car was in collision with a train in this Okanagan city.

Ludwig Ritter was only slightly injured Tuesday night after his car collided with the train at a Canadian National Railway crossing. The car was dragged a short distance by the train before it rolled off the track.

Police said the vehicle was destroyed and the retired man's life possibly was saved by the fact he was wearing a seat belt and not tossed from his car.

Don't Look Now, But There's a Leak in Family Boat

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Too much of the world, and of Canada, insists on being surprised by what is happening to the price of oil. It is an unhealthy attitude because it enables people to avoid preparing for the inevitable.

The new pricing schedule set up by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will introduce increases totalling 14.5 per cent by next October. The countries of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, including Western Europe, the United States, Japan and Canada, had not planned for this in their deficit projections for next year, which was foolish of them. OPEC signals — and OPEC losses to North American inflation — had made it a very likely proposition that the new price increase would be big.

Canada has its share in this international ostriching, and its own domestic variation. No sooner were the OPEC price increases announced than various Canadian soothsayers were declaring that the increases would have no immediate impact on Canada. That is so much nonsense.

Canada imports more oil than it exports — about 30 per cent of its needs. This imported oil is subsidized by Ottawa (that is, by the Canadian taxpayers) to bring it level with the fixed Canadian price. The costs of this subsidization are not equalled by the tax imposed on Canadian oil going to the United States. Starting with the first of the OPEC price increases, on January 1, the bill for subsidization will start to grow, for a total estimated increase in 1979 of $50 million.

It has also apparently been forgotten by many that Ottawa and Alberta had already traded in one $1-a-barrel increase on January 1 for two, one on July 1, 1979, and one on January 1, 1980. These increases were hitched to the world and U.S. prices and might not have occurred without the OPEC increases; and Canada is still committed to move to the world price. One of the few unsurprised Canadians, Alberta Energy Minister Don Getty, says the Ottawa-Alberta deal anticipated the OPEC price increases.

Informetrica Ltd. an Ottawa-based private economic forecasting group, estimates that a $1-a-barrel increase means an increase of 0.7 per cent in the consumer price index (the less objective Ontario government figures the increase at a full 1 per cent lower growth in the real gross national product.

Anybody who says the OPEC prices will not affect Canada is not facing the facts. The facts, however, did not escape all members of the community.

As soon as the OPEC increases were announced the Canadian dollar fell again. The reasoning behind its fall was that the big oil price increase would fuel inflation in the United States and weaken the U.S. dollar and therefore the Canadian dollar or, as The Globe and mail's Hugh Anderson put it, "Sellers of Canadian dollars were acting in the belief that what is bad for the United States is worse for Canada." Canadian and U.S. bond prices were hit by the oil price increase.

Some analysts are also getting anxious about the rate of increase in the Canadian monetary base and in the Bank of Canada's holdings of federal government securities. Year-over-year growth in the monetary base was around 9.5 per cent in the first quarter of 1977, but this has risen to about 13 per cent in the most recent three months. Bank of Canada holdings of federal government securities have been registering year-over-year gains in the 18 to 28 per cent range throughout 1978. This is what is referred to in circles frowned upon by the government as printing money. Another harbinger of more inflation.

The country's growth rate is lower than expected, the price of energy is higher, the value of the dollar is down, the government is again speeding up the rate at which it is living beyond its (and our) means. If there is not an inflation bubble in 1979 it will be a miracle.

But the most frightening part of the situation is that we are not facing things. We have not accepted that energy is going to take a larger part of personal and national income for the foreseeable future. Our government is behaving as though inflation were no threat.

It is like firmly refusing to notice the leak in the bottom of the family boat.

By SETH S. KING

Warnings that vast sections of agricultural land in Africa and Asia are disappearing into the deserts, while the fertility of a fifth of the earth's cropland declines, are by now so familiar they no longer startle. But it was something else again to hear Bob Bergland, the Secretary of Agriculture, proclaim recently that soil erosion in the United States was at a record high, and that water supplies were being reduced at a reckless pace.

"We are on a collision course with disaster," he said.

It was also surprising to hear Lester R. Brown, director of the independent research organization, Worldwatch Institute, say that American farmers were not caring for their vulnerable soils as well today as they did a generation ago.

There may have been a trace of hyperbole in Bergland's alarm. But soil conservation experts would dispute him only on the degree of his concern, and none of them would quarrel with Brown's appraisal.

Many adults now in their 40's were brought up to believe that America's farmland had been made secure by the millions of dollars spent on New Deal soil conservation programs that introduced farmers to contour plowing and draped the cornbelt in soil-preserving terraces.

But the Agriculture Department's Soil Conservation Service, the federal agency that supervises protection of the land, has found that in 1977 more than 2 billion tons of topsoil was washed away from croplands and an additional 3 billion tons from crop and range land was eroded away by the wind.

This preliminary survey found that the hardest hit areas were not in the old Dust Bowl of the Southwest but in the rolling hills of Missouri, western Tennessee, and western Mississippi, which each lost more than 10 tons of topsoil per acre of cropland.

The survey also showed that such highly fertile areas as Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, and Nebraska were annually losing between 4 and 10 tons per acre and that the wind was blowing out more than 10 tons per acre every year from the cotton and wheat lands of northwest Texas and the feed grain lands of New Mexico and Arizona.

The reasons for an accelerated erosion of topsoil reflect both the changes in farming patterns that began in the mid-1960's and the economic roller coaster American farmers have been riding since the early 1970's.

When grain prices soared in 1973, all planting restrictions were removed and most American farmers plowed up every acre they owned or could rent. Much of this planting was on marginal land that erodes easily.

New chemical fertilizers and weed killers developed in the past 15 years have lured farmers away from the old systems of crop rotation that included resting a part of their cropland each year under a cover of grass or nitrogen-producing legumes that protected the soil tilled the year before.

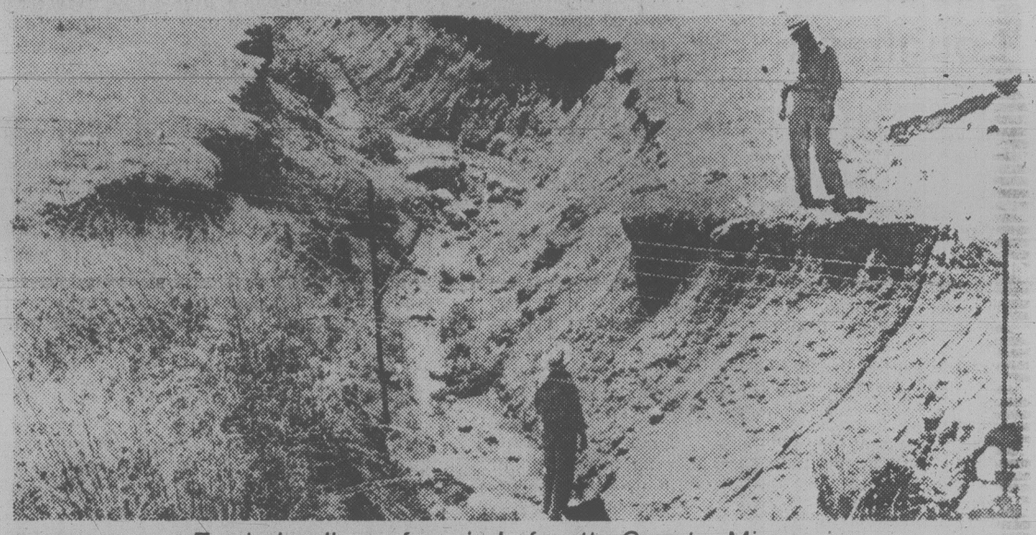

And the soil-preserving terraces were designed for farm machinery that tilled four rows at a time. The monstrous new machinery of today tills eight or more rows at a time and won't fit over the old terraces, many of which have been obliterated.

While overgrazing, overtilling, and, in some areas, excessive irrigation of lands in Africa and Asia are slashing grain and livestock production so sharply that many developing countries can no longer feed themselves, the effects of today's topsoil losses on food production in the United States are expected to be felt more slowly.

Soil scientists say that under normal weather and farming conditions, the organic matter and crop residues that good farmers leave after harvest will replace as much as five tons per acre of soil loss. Any amount above that, however, is gone forever.

On a single acre, five tons is the equivalent of about one-thirtieth of an inch of topsoil. It would take many years if rain and wind to erode away the 10 to 14 inches of fertile dirt that cover good land.

The more immediate concern of the soil conservationists is what the new erosion is doing to rural watersheds and to municipal water supplies. Many small streams in the Middle West and South are rapidly silting up, reducing the flow into the municipal storage reservoirs, which themselves are shrinking as silt fills them. Eroded soil is washing or blowing into fertile bottom lands, covering them with silt and increasing the threat of flooding.

Eroded gully on farm in Lafayette County, Missouri

In the western sections of the corn and wheat belts, and especially in the cotton and wheat lands of northwest Texas, the pumping of ground water is lowering the water tables faster than inflowing rain can recharge them.

The washing away of soil in the Mississippi basin is now at a rate, the Army Corps of Engineers says, that brings more than 400 tons of silt per minute to the river's mouth. And last month the United States Geological Survey reported that 120 square miles of Arizona's irrigated farm land is sinking as the ground water is pulled out. In some places, the surface has subsided by a much as seven feet.

In the past decade there has been a small but steady loss in natural fertility from erosion, even in some of the best lands of the Middle West, R. M. Davis, director of the Soil Conservation Service, said recently. It is happening at a time when the country's per-acre yield rate is no longer increasing but its population is. In addition, more than 2 million acres of agricultural land is being lost each year to urban development, he said.

"The technology is there to stop these soil losses, but we haven't kept pace in conservation with the new farming methods," Davis said.

Rites of Passage

LONDON—When a bishop suggests the young should do a form of national service, one usually thinks of some bellicose prelate hankering for the good old days of church parades. Last month, however, it was the Bishop of Southwark, and his plan was simply that the young and unemployed should do a couple of years' community service; it would be a chance to prove their worth by doing something other than carve up old ladies and throw bottles at policemen.

Not that there aren't plenty of people who'd like to see a straight return to conscription. Plenty of other European countries have it; the bleakness of the barrack ensures that no man ever takes home comforts for granted again; it keeps up the grand old oral traditions of The Ball at Killiemuir and The Harlot of Jerusalem.

Alas, in order to get its raw recruits into anything like manageable shape the Army has to begin by stamping out any pansy hankerings for personal opinions or privacy or individuality — just the things we've been trying so hard to instil into our young. And the military themselves don't like it: they'd far rather have soldiers who are keen to be there and can be chucked out at will, than be stuck with a bunch of rough-necks who will only do anything because they'll be put on a charge if they don't.

One's always told, of course, that the service gave the chaps a respect for authority. Actually it didn't do anything of the sort. What it gave people was a conviction that you couldn't change authority; so all their energies went into outwitting it instead. Ex-service people at college thought university rules were ludicrous, but they never tried to alter them, they simply broke them; it was the ones who hadn't learned the futility of protest who did something to get things changed.

My husband, one mild afternoon at RAF Padgate, tired of emptying heavy dustbins; so, noticing that the bins and the lids had numbers and that they didn't always match, he spent a more happy afternoon trotting around doing no more than write down the numbers of the dustbins and their lids. "What are you doing, airman?" asked a passing sergeant. My husband explained. "Who told you to do that?" "The corporal, sergeant." "Corporal who?"

"The corporal who told me to do it, sergeant." "Oh. Ah. Very well."

Such antics may have fitted him for life as an industrial spy, able to get into any factory anywhere simply by carrying a plank and looking plausible. But it's hard to see what the attitude did for the questing, cooperative Britain we were supposed to be building. It certainly didn't teach people to think; it may have taught them to skive.

But would it not be possible to devise a sensible and humane scheme that would avoid such military pitfalls? Couldn't the young be dragooned into doing what outfits like the conservation Corps and Task Force do voluntarily now — visiting old ladies, beautifying slag-heaps, chatting to the handicapped? Might it not, even, be a chance to repair washing machines and the chaps to learn something in the communal kitchens more skilled than the spud-bashing of yore? Of course, the unions would be dead against the first and the grannies of Cornwall, who couldn't stand the thought of little boys learning sewing in primary school, would doubtless swallow their false teeth at the mere suggestion of the second. But about grannies and unions I feel the same: if you confine yourself to trying things that won't put their backs up, you might just as well not try at all.

One attraction the idea does have, to my mind, is that it would provide a definite barrier between one's life as an adolescent and one's life as a real grown-up — a rite de passage in the anthropological sense. In our society, unfortunately, only a few apprentices, a few nurses and those who think that college exams will sort the men from the boys (and then have to worry how you sort the men from the academics) have any sort of landmarks to pass — except sexual ones. And, since they are kept at school long past puberty, the only rite that seems to prove them adult is all too apt to be marriage.

I'll get married, that'll prove I'm old enough to get away from Mum, she says. We'll get married, then we'll get a coucil flat, says he — possibly to a girl he's never been away from long enough to know if she's really his first choice at all. No wonder they don't live happily ever after. National service may have taken the fresh sensitive young lovers away and welded them into a barrack-room gang, but it did at least help them to grow up first and then get married, instead of the other way round. And anything else that took the young firmly away from home might do the same.

Only — I just don't see in practice how it could be done. "Community service" sounds so beautiful; but it would have to be compulsory, or it would leave out the very ones we're worried about: the drifters, the disillusioned, the ones who played truant at school. And how do you make anyone do community service, without getting back to the old Army way of doing things? Solve that one, and I'll get interested. But otherwise. . . .

"What are you doing with that paint-bucket?"

"Who told you to do that?"

"The social worker, sir."

"Which social worker?"

Jogging Came Naturally In the Shiver and Quiver

OKAY, so it was cold. But it didn't stop the hardy souls. About 120 of us ranging in age from two years to 86 braved the elements Monday for the now-traditional YM-YWCA New Year's Day walk, jog or what-have-you to Clover Point and back.

Because of the temperature, in fact, more jogged than walked this year to keep the blood flowing as the bracing wind whipped over the cliffs along Dallas Road.

And once inside in the warmth again there was plenty to help restore the circulation: cups of hot apple cider, coffee and chocolate, doughnuts and muffins and, for those who felt up to it, a swim, sauna and a steam bath.

They had a hard job getting me out of the steam room, I can tell you, as I was delighted just to relax and be hot again after all the cold we've been getting.

But most of the walkers and joggers were happy to just sip cider and share the camaraderie in the auditorium, chatting with people like Archie McKinnon, the 82-year-old grandfather of the Y who was there to hand out door prizes that ranged from movie theatre tickets to stacks of Big Macs.

With people like Donald Elliott, who will be 86 in June and walked the whole way to Clover Point and back to the Y, almost four and-a-half miles.

Like 58-year-old Earl Hembroff, who is blind, and his seeing-eye dog Fleetable-Eatable (Fleet for short) who not only made it both ways but actually went further than most of us because once he got down on the Dallas Road cliffs "Fleet felt like more of a walk."

And with others like Winona Pugh, the Y's mobile fitness director, who organized the event; Tom Cardinal, associate adult program director; and Vic Lindal, former top volleyball coach in the province.

Billed as a New Year's Day Family Affair, it turned out to be just that for the Cardinals with six-year-old Jenny jogging along between Tom and wife Rosemary and two-year-old Sara alternating between a jog or two and a ride atop Dad's shoulders.

"It's just great this year," Tom told me. "It used to be predominantly Y people taking part but we've got a bigger turnout and a wider mixture of people this time. And it's good to see community involvement in the shape of donated door prizes."

Two of my children left after a tiring afternoon happily clutching their prizes — a meal for two at the Keg 'N Cleaver and a couple of passes to Sealand — but what they talked about most on the way home was their run in the cold.

That was a shared thing. Something they could feel and understand, that even when conditions and times are adverse it's easier and more exciting if they are shared with others. And I feel this is a thought we need to keep with us as we step into the rest of 1979.

It was a new thing, too, for many. A decision to try something different and to start the New Year on a healthful note. That's why many came, they said.

For Vic Lindal and his family the Y outing was their second run of the New Year.

"My three boys and I played bridge until midnight," Vic explained with a grin.

"As the clock struck, we had a toast. Then, because we had decided to start the New Year on a healthy foot, we donned track suits and went out for our first run of the year at 12:05."

Must admit I was well and truly (no, not sloshed) settled by a roaring fire with a glass of wine to raise at the magic hour.

But doesn't Vic's midnight madness make some of you feel just a little guilty at the condition you were in at 12:05 . . .

LAWYERS ASKED FOR RELEASE

Saanich, Legal Firm Part

Saanich has severed its $15,000-a-year contract with the Victoria law firm of Pearlman and Lindholm and will consider appointing its own permanent staff solicitor.

Council Tuesday night approved the firm's request to be released immediately from the contract, three months before it was due to expire March 31. The firm and its predecessors had acted as legal advisers to the municipality for more than 60 years.

The action follows the recent B.C. Supreme Court decision to quash the Minnie Mountain land-use contract bylaw because Ald. David Paterson is employed by Pearlman and Lindholm as office manager.

Paterson voted for the bylaw, on which Pearlman and Lindholm had advised the municipality.

In a lengthy letter to Saanich asking to be released from its contract, Pearlman and Lindholm noted that Mr. Justice Trainor had quashed the bylaw on grounds of Paterson's "purported indirect interest" in the land-use contract, "merely because the developer is a client of ours (although we did not act for him with respect to the particular matter in dispute). . ."

For that reason, the firm said, "we have decided that an earlier cessation of our association would be in the best interests of the municipality, our employee Ald. Paterson and the good people of the municipality."

In any case, the letter stated, the rapid growth of the municipality and the increasing complexity of its business appeared to indicate the need for the appointment of a permanent staff solicitor.

Pearlman and Lindholm also pointed out that it was becoming increasingly difficult for the firm to maintain a senior solicitor on solely municipal business three or four days a week, as well as a junior solicitor one or two days a week.

At an in-camera meeting following the open council meeting, council accepted the firm's offer to release lawyer Christopher Nation (who has been serving as associate municipal solicitor) to act as municipal solicitor until a permanent appointment is made.

Council endorsed a six-month contract with Nation for a fee of $14,250.

A staff recommendation will be prepared for the finance committee on whether Saanich should hire its own solicitor or invite other firms to bid for supplying legal services.

Only Aldermen Irene Block and John Mika opposed the motion to end Saanich's contract with the legal firm.

Block questioned the need for such "unseemly haste," and suggested the contract be allowed to run its proper course to expiry in March.

Mayor Mel Couvelier replied that Trainor's verbal judgment had raised a number of legal points "which on the face of it appear contradictory and which appear to put in question the possibility that Ald. Paterson should be sitting on council at all."

If the contract were to be ended in March anyway it might as well be terminated immediately, the mayor said, adding: "There's no sense in us buying potential litigation or headaches."

POLICE BOARD CHOICE 'GRAVE DISCOURTESY'

Saanich council is upset with the provincial cabinet for appointing Victoria lawyer Bob Hutchison to fill one of three vacancies on the Saanich police board.

Hutchison's name was not included in a list of four possible appointees suggested by the municipality.

At Tuesday night's council meeting the cabinet choice was described variously as a slight, a grave discourtesy, an embarrassment and possibly illegal.

Aldermen agreed Saanich should make its displeasure known to Premier Bennett. They also asked the municipal solicitor to look into the legality of Hutchison's appointment.

The latter point was raised by Ald. John Mika, who said he understood Hutchison was the only police board member appointed in the province without the prior endorsement of the B.C. Police Commission.

Such approval is either implicitly or explicitly required by provincial legislation, Mika said.

He also termed the appointment unwise because Hutchison had represented the Saanich police board in the two most recent arbitration proceedings involving a contract dispute between the board and the police union.

"He is the very fellow who has fought them (the union) on behalf of the board," Mika said. "That does not augur well for the police force in the next three years."

Parking Solution Expected

A traffic problem that frustrated a city business so much it threatened to move out of the city will probably be solved soon, Victoria Ald. Bill McElroy said today.

McElroy visited the Hafer Machine Co. Ltd., 1720 Store, last week after reading the company was thinking of leaving the area because of traffic problems.

Company general manager Barry Challenger said line-ups at the nearby city garbage wharf were blocking his trucks from entering the plant, and when company vehicles parked in the street they were ticketed.

Challenger said the machine shop, which employs 30, was sometimes blocked off for up to two hours.

But McElroy says after looking at the problem he's sure the traffic engineers can sort out the matter.

"It's not a big problem really and I'm sure we can work out some sort of compromise," said McElroy, chairman of council's traffic and transportati committee.

He said the traffic department will send someone down to meet Challenger next week and discuss solutions.

Asbestos Insulation Search Set At Schools

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

An investigation has been ordered to see if cancer-causing asbestos spray has been used as insulation in Greater Victoria schools.

The check is being carried out by school district and regional board officials.

Former board chairman Susan Brice said Tuesday the problem probably doesn't exist in this district, but administrators are looking into it.

Dr. Allen Arneil, regional health officer, said the regional district's school health officer will discuss the situation with school authorities before taking any action.

Dr. Arneil said while there is no evidence the problem exists here, medical health officials are alerted.

"We've got to watch we don't go overboard being concerned, but on the other hand, we've got to watch we don't go overboard being smug about it," Arneil said.

Concern has been expressed in B.C. after recent reports from the U.S. that millions of public school children may be exposed to harmful asbestos particles in the air of their classrooms.

A U.S. environmental group has charged one out of every six schools could have dangerous asbestos coatings and has filed a petition with the Environmental Protection Agency demanding it identify all public schools where asbestos is a hazard.

The Environmental Defence Fund is charging that school children across the U.S. are subjected to cancer risk of unknown magnitude.

William Hawker, B.C.'s acting superintendent of facilities development, said the ministry doesn't know if the problem is serious in B.C.

He said there are 1,600 schools in the province and it's possible some of the others might have similar problems.

He doesn't think there is much of a problem in B.C. and said the situation is only dangerous if asbestos fibre is openly packed around pipes or sprayed on walls.

"If it's hidden, it's safe."

TOWN TALK

If you feel like whooping it up on New Year's Eve and travelling home by bus afterward the thing to remember is — Never on Sunday.

That was the cold, sobering truth which struck a number of Greater Victoria revellers who had been counting on using B.C. Hydro's traditional free bus service.

They found themselves facing a long walk or an expensive taxi ride because there were no buses running after about 11.30 p.m.

The official explanation from Hydro transit manager George Seright is that no special arrangements were made because New Year's Eve this year fell on a Sunday.

"Running the late service involves overtime and overtime is voluntary. We just ran the normal service," he said.

Paramount is mulling the possibility of using the editorial rooms as a set for a movie called Letters From Frank and production manager Paul Tucker said today a decision will be made soon.

Shooting for the movie, starring Art Carney, Jean Stapleton and Lillian Gish, begins next Wednesday in the Lower Mainland area and will take about three weeks.

Tucker says the $1.3 production will become a CBS movie of the week.

The story centres around a newspaper paymaster whose job becomes redundant because of a switch to computers. He chooses early retirement rather than accept another job and the movie will focus on the problems he faces.

Anyone who wandered past Bay Street Armoury late Saturday morning couldn't help wonder if they had suddenly landed in the midst of a military take-over.

Rents to Rise On Apartments

Apartment rents may rise about six per cent in Victoria this year because the vacancy rate has declined, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation district manager Chris Dowling said today.

He said a federal CMHC survey shows the October rate was down to 1.1 per cent from 4.4 per cent in April, 1978.

"This came as a bit of a surprise because there are still a large number of advertisements for apartments to rent," Dowling said.

"Still, they went out and counted about 20,000 apartment units so the figures must be accurate."

Dowling said the new situation will allow some landlords to raise their rents to recover increased costs this year, but only by small amounts.

This would still leave rents lower than in Vancouver, Calgary or Edmonton, he said.

He said the ideal vacancy rate is from 1.0 to 1.5 per cent, which is the present situation in the Greater Victoria area.

The Victoria rate is below Vancouver's 1.3 per cent, and Calgary's 1.5 per cent but above Edmonton's 0.9 and Toronto's 0.7 per cent.

The vacancy rate in the Victoria area, by district, is Victoria City 1.2 per cent, Saanich 0.2, Oak Bay nil, Esquimalt 1.9 per cent.

In Victoria City, the rate was 0.1 per cent in the Cook Street area, 1.3 per cent along Fort St. and 0.6 per cent in the James Bay area. In the remainder of the city it was 2.4 per cent.
